Education costs are debate issue

By LEN PIZZEY
Editor

About 80 or so Dysart et al ratepayers will go to the polls next Tuesday with some solid impressions of who they're voting for, following Monday night's all-candidates meeting at the Haliburton Legion.

Incumbents and candidates for municipal and school board positions were limited to five minute speeches, but it was enough time for them to touch on some of the main points of their platforms.

First to speak - in alphabetical order - were the eight people running for five Dysart seats on the Haliburton County Board of Education.

Wanda Byers, making her first try for a seat, said her priority as trustee would be to keep standards increases should be restricted to between three and five percent. Keeping taxes down "is a must," Keefer said, because many property owners in the area "live on limited incomes."

"Honesty and fairness is my position and I will not deviate," Keefer said.

Larry Podmore, a permanent resident of Drag Lake, also is making his first try for a trustee seat. Podmore was born and educated in England, served six years in the Royal Marines, and had varied business experience in England and Malaya before emigrating to Canada. He is a former teacher at Malvern Collegiate in Toronto, and retired from the profession in 1979 as head of history.

Podmore's main emphasis was on the need to equip young people with of educations as high as possible. She is particularly interested in special education not only for children with learning disabilities, but for gifted youngsters. Byers stressed the importance of curriculum uniformity among schools throughout the county and the need for "good rapport" among schools, the board of education and home and school associations.

She said she would bring "enthusiasm and commitment" to the position of trustee.

Lynn Craigmyle, an incumbent trustee who was appointed to the board two years ago when Dr. Blair Pierce moved to London, Ontario, described his work on the board as "a real learning process". He said he is "very impressed with what he has seen", and pointed to a number of things the board has accomplished during its term, including the hiring of a curriculum co-ordinator for the county. Craigmyle said the co-ordinator's job is "a vital function, and I fully support it."

Craigmyle said that before he joined the board he thought many decisions were rubber stamped, but "it's not done that way at all."

"I'd like to return as a trustee, and I ask for your support," Craigmyle concluded.

Isabel Keefer also is making her first bid at winning a seat on the board. Describing herself as a "tax preparer and memorialist" with a varied background of business related education and experience, she said she wants to see "new blood" on the board.

Keefer suggested that spending the basic skills to compete once their formal education is completed.

He said that while he is not an opponent of change, there must be "a proper balance between education and the ability of the taxpaying community to pay for it."

Veteran trustee Len Salvatori used his five minutes to recount some of the board's key accomplishments in the past term, and to touch on the reasons why the education portion of local taxes has been rising rapidly. He noted that while mandatory programs such as special education are very expensive, provincial support as a percentage of total expenditures has been declining steadily.

In 1969 the board had a budget of $1.9 million and 45 percent of that amount was provided from provincial tax revenues. In 1985 the board's budget was $8.5 million but the grant ceiling on ordinary expenditures had fallen to 28 percent.

Salvatori said the board has asked to meet with provincial officials to discuss the problem, but there has been no response to date.

In asking for continued public support, Salvatori said he is very interested in education in the county "and I will continue to do the job as well as I can."

Joan Sawyer is another candidate making her first try for a seat on the board. Sawyer said she has been involved in politics for many years, and in making her first attempt at public office, she looked for a

Dysart et al firemen battled in vain to put out a fire which engulfed the home of John Curry on the Old Buckhorn Road just south of Haliburton on Monday. No one was home at the time of the blaze. A passing motorist noticed smoke and turned in the alarm, but the fire was well established in the attic and quickly spread throughout the single storey home. There were no injuries.

Confusion over new by-law clears

By MARTHA PERKINS
Staff Reporter

There was more confusion and debate Wednesday night at the public meeting concerning the proposed changes of the Anson, Hindon and Minden zoning by-laws, but at least ratepayers seemed content, for the present time, with some of the answers received from the planner and council members.

This was the second open meeting, intended to let the taxpayers express their concerns about proposed zoning changes that affected their property. The first one was held two weeks ago, and of the six specific requests made at that time, Deputy Reeve Ed Pergolas said all were taken care of satisfactorily.

Before getting down to details, council was first asked to explain the relationship between the official plan, which was passed six months ago, and the new zoning by-laws which have changed some of the restrictions and freedoms of land owners in certain areas.

The official plan is a statement of intent, said municipal planner Robert Lehman of Robert Lehman Planning Consultants, that deals with long term goals in general terms. It may say that Minden is to have a downtown, and commercial and residential areas in certain places.

The zoning by-law, which has to conform to the official plan, sets down specific regulations dealing with such matters as lakeshore frontage and depth. Future changes to the by-law do not necessarily mean the official plan will have to be changed as each case will be looked at individually, Lehman explained.

Every ten years, municipalities update their official plan, making sure that it reflects the overall plan for the future of the community. This time, Lehman said, the planners took into account such things as the effects of allowing more cottagers or permanent dwellers to build on certain lakes. The Ministry of the Environment was brought in to test the water quality and determine the potential for over-use.

The existing zoning by-law was drawn up in 1967 and no longer reflects the overall plan for the area. The present public meetings were organized because the municipality is required to notify ratepayers 30 days in advance that new zoning by-laws are going to be passed. After council approves them, people have 35 days to air their complaints. When no agreement can be reached, a hearing will be arranged with the Ontario Municipal Board. If people request a by-law change later, it costs $350, but Lehman pointed out that that is a very small percentage of the cost of the land.

"What we're trying to do with these meetings is to go through these things ahead of time," he said.

After the by-law procedures were explained, council candidate Vern Graham asked what public meetings were held about the changes in the official plan.

"You're hiding something from us," he said. "You're not present-

Communication is Snowdon issue

Communications between council and ratepayers, and the location of a sand/salt pile were the two main issues at Snowdon Township's all-candidates meeting last Friday night.

About a score of ratepayers attended the meeting at the township hall in Gelert to hear brief speeches from the three people running for one vacant council seat, and to question incumbent members of council on past decisions.

First to speak were the three people who submitted nomination papers for the one seat which had not been filled by acclamation at the close of the initial nomination period two weeks ago.

Bill Powell, a 10 year resident of the township, told ratepayers that he takes "a serious interest in the community" and wants to see improvements while keeping expenditures within budget.

He pledged to listen to people's concerns if he is elected.

Doris Robertson, a 13 year resident of the area, and like Powell, making her first attempt at a municipal seat, said she has "always been interested" in the township's municipal affairs. Robertson acknowledged her inexperience, saying she would make no promises "because I don't really know what I'm getting into," but maintained that council could benefit from "a woman's input."

Keith Schrader, who is a native of Gelert and recently retired from the Canadian Armed Forces, emphasized the value of his past experience and his confident approach to decision making.

Schrader said most ratepayers appear to be happy with the performance of the previous council, and noted that he has "no intention of rocking the boat." He said council must be "honest, open and responsive to citizens of the township", and urged ratepayers to vote for the candidate they feel will best represent the interest of the township.

Incumbents then were given an opportunity to address the gathering. Reeve Bob Vick, a 20 year veteran of the position who is back by acclamation, thanked the people for their support over the years. He said this would be his last term on council, and expressed the hope that new people would come forward to seek the reeve's job if he does not stand for re-election at the end of the new term.

Deputy reeve Dwayne Wruth also expressed appreciation to ratepayers for the support they have given him.

Councillor Jack Hills made brief mention of his involvement as

Union to vote again

Negotiators said to endorse contract

Members of the International Woodworkers of America, local 2100, negotiating committee are going to advise striking members at G.W. Martin Lumber Limited to vote in favour of a new settlement, a lumber company spokesman said.

In a nine and a half hour bargaining session that lasted until 10:30 Monday night, company president Brian Sarginson, vice presidents Chuck Lindsay and Bill Thompson, sat down at the Harcourt Community Centre with union representatives to hammer out an agreement between the company and its striking members.

"We are anxious to settle and they were anxious to settle, so I guess that's why they talked so long," said union spokesman Barry Hendry.

The new company offer is unavailable for release. Union members are expected to vote on it this Sunday.

Police News

General Occurrences

During the period of October 2 to November 3, personnel at Minden Detachment investigated the following occurrences: five motor vehicle accidents in which one person was killed and two injured; and 42 general occurrences, including five break and enters and five thefts.

Fatality

On Saturday, November 2, at 5:45 p.m. on Hwy. 118 near West Guilford Dump Rd., Rita Barry, age 25, of Stanhope Township, was driving her 1985 Dodge pickup truck towards Haliburton village when she lost control of the vehicle. The truck swerved from shoulder to shoulder then slid into the right ditch where it struck a rockcut and rolled over. A passenger in the right seat, Laura Rowden, age 7, of Stanhope Township, received severe head injuries as a result of the rollover. She was pronounced dead at the Haliburton Hospital. Another passenger, Jeremy Barry, age 3, and the driver, received only minor injuries. The $14,000 vehicle was totally destroyed.

PC Joe Dorricott is investigating. At this time no decision has been made regarding charges or whether an inquest will be held.

Break Enter Investigation

The investigation into a series of break and enters at seasonal residences in the Haliburton - Eagle Lake area is broadening in scope. Investigators have identified at least 12 persons they feel are responsible for numerous break, enter and thefts on lakes including Cranberry, Redstone and Coleman and at buildings on the Harburn Rd. and at Eagle Lake. A quantity of stolen property has been recovered. No charges have as yet been laid as the investigation is continuing and further persons are being sought for questioning. The investigation is thought to involve illegal entries into at least 50 seasonal residences. PCs Ken Wesley and Ben Manuge are investigating.

Stolen Car

Basil Smith, age 35, of Orillia, awoke Saturday morning at a Haliburton area motel and discovered his 1967 Ford convertible had been stolen overnight. The next day, November 3, the car was located pushed over a steep embankment in Snowdon Township with $3,000 damage. The ignition had been hotwired.

Glamorgan briefs...

A regular meeting of the Glamorgan Township council was held Wednesday, October 2 and the following matters were considered:

Allen Warwick was asked to explain his proposal, which was to have a portion of an original allowance for road between the Township of Glamorgan and Dysart, closed and conveyed to him. Council requested that Warwick discuss the matter with the Ministry of Natural Resources and the Municipality of Dysart et al prior to further consideration by council. Warwick agreed to do so and departed.

The following accounts were approved for payment: General Voucher of $116, 604.13; Road Voucher of $8,903.85; and Welfare Payroll of $2,483.79.

In the absence of councillor Hunter, who is chairman of the roads and waste disposal site committee, Reeve Bob McCausland reported on the matters considered by that committee.

Petition will be made to the Ministry of Transportation and Communications for payment of interim subsidy on 1985 road expenditures to October 31, 1985.

An application for closure and conveyance of that portion of the shoreline road allowance fronting the Mark's property in Lot 26, Concession 3 was approved in principle.

Getting a friendly but unusual hello from some dressed-up Grade Two students is John Pollard, president of the residents' council at Extendicare. The Victoria Street School students were there to share some spooky smiles with the residents as well as sing some songs and nibble on some cookies on Thursday.

Vandalism increases against Domain

By MARTHA PERKINS
Staff Reporter

Vandalism of Domain of Killian property, which began a year ago, has increased dramatically in the past month, and now includes phone calls, says one of the resort's owners.

At first, signs directing people to the Domain were just knocked down, but now person(s) unknown have spray painted a large sign once and the four smaller signs twice. As well, car tires have been slashed and cars scratched.

Last week, Dante Larcade, one of the owners, received a phone call in the middle of the night, from someone with a "Godfather" voice asking "How do you like your signs?" More than 20 other calls have been received, sometimes with the other person just laughing or remaining silent.

"After having John Eakins at the Chamber of Commerce meeting giving a speech on the potential viability of tourism, it's obscene," said Anne Axler, public relations coordinator for the Domain. "The last thing we need for the industry is having people make it look bad."

She and Larcade point to the instance of a crew from Swiss Air arriving in Haliburton to spend their stop-over here and being distressed over the signs of vandalism.

"(All the vandalism) was systematically against us," said Larcade. One of the small signs is surrounded by other cottage signs yet it was only the Domain sign that was damaged, first with bullet holes, then with car paint. Someone needed a step ladder or some other boost to reach the sign at the corner of Highland and Pine Streets.

The signs were done locally but Larcade says the resort cannot afford to get them done professionally each time they are vandalised. The large sign cost $400 to repair, the smaller ones $150 each.

Axler stresses that the Domain does its hiring and shopping locally, helping the community as a whole. "We try to support the community and make the community grow, not just the Domain." What hurts the Domain, hurts everyone else in lost revenue, she said.

At the last Chamber of Commerce board of directors meeting, Larcade, a director, said that when he mentioned vandalism, other resort and business owners said "Join the club." He wants to suggest starting up a reward fund to help local businesses get vandals prosecuted.

The Minden OPP detachment is investigating the incident.

Hydro joins prevention week

Minden area manager Cal Wilson announced Monday that Ontario Hydro is launching a crime prevention program in conjunction with Ontario Crime Prevention Week, November 3-9.

"Hydro on Watch (HOW) is a formalization of activities our staff have been carrying out for many years," Wilson said.

"The essence of the program is to make efficient and effective use of radios we have in our vehicles," he said, "to alert authorities of incidents in progress."

Area staff are being briefed on what to look for and what should be reported immediately to the authorities, such as police and fire departments, ambulance services, hospitals and animal control offices.

Identification logos are being put on all of Ontario Hydro's 2,600 radio-equipped vehicles to remind customers and the public of the program.

Communication skills essence of child's education about life

Submitted by H.D. Robinson
Curriculum Co-Ordinator
Haliburton County Board of Education

The second article in our series on Primary Education in Haliburton County is written by Diane Dawson, a teacher of Kindergarten at Archie Stouffer Elementary School in Minden. Her topic is "The Importance of Talking to and Sharing Experiences with your Child".

Young children have two very strong needs...to move and to talk. We are always anxious to have our children talk early in their lives and from then on we don't seem to be able to get a word in ourselves and we search for ways to keep them quiet.

Language is the window to our child's inner thoughts. In infancy, we react to our child's wishes and whims in non-verbal ways. Eventually, they tell and in fact demand their needs, wants and desires. Language provides an easy way to interpret what is exactly rattling around inside their heads. He asks questions, millions of them; he loves to hear himself talk; he loves to practise repetitive songs and rhymes. It's like music to his ears. The stimulation of others talking and communicating their experiences spur more questions and interesting stories producing increased vocabulary and understanding of the proper usage and meaning of words.

In communicating, talking and sharing experiences with your child, you give him a reference with which to compare himself to others. You supply him with time perception (how things were "then" and "now"). Sharing experiences of other social and cultural background helps him to understand that there is a world out there beyond his, and that outside of his family circle families operate differently and the world is a very large place indeed. Speaking to your child helps him to draw out and analyze his fears, frustrations and joys, and allows you to present problems to him before they occur, (i.e. - death). Some children won't be active participants in discussions, but talking gives the non-verbal child a chance to learn in an unthreatening and loving atmosphere. At the point when he is ready to talk about things, you have given him lots of "input" and information to draw on.

In early life, most of the child's development is determined by his learning at home, which plays a major part in drawing out and structuring his abilities, moulding his personality and behaviour, giving direction to his interests and shaping his attitudes. The child's curiosity reaches out in an attempt to relate firstly and mostly to parents and then upon entering school, the circle of communication includes peers and teachers, sharing common and unique experiences.

Keep on talking...you may tire out before the children do, but if you were as lucky as I, there are many fond memories of my parents relating their childhood experiences to me; the walking miles to school, limited allowances...my gosh, I think I just told my own child the same story! That's what traditions are made of.

Their words are their tools; talk to them in the gentle language of love.

Dysart hopefuls questioned

position "where I could be most effective."

Education influences a person's whole life, she noted, and it is vitally important to the future of the county.

She said she has the skills "to make a useful contribution" and is willing to give her time and effort to the duties of the board.

Incumbent trustee Nancy Stinson noted that she is a past chairman of the board and has served on many of its key committees during past terms. Stinson said the quality of education offered to local youngsters is one of the best available, and said she wants to ensure that "our tax dollars are used wisely."

Wayne W. Wood said he brings "no preconceived ideas" to his first attempt for a board seat. The 25 year veteran of the Canadian armed forces who now operates Ashburnham Meat Market, promised that if elected next Tuesday he would "serve honestly and faithfully and to the best of my ability." He also said he would be available to talk to ratepayers at any time.

Reeve Murray Fearrey, who chaired the meeting, had high praise for the candidates, saying the race for the five board seats is evidence of "democracy in action."

For the council portion of the meeting the chairman reversed the order of speeches, beginning with Miles Roberts, who is challenging incumbent John Parish for the council seat in Ward 2.

Roberts cited his background as a private investor and a leasing broker as his principal asset in seeking a council position.

He said his business dealings are principally outside the county, and would not force him to declare a conflict of interest in council deliberations.

Roberts said he would be "a watchdog over your tax dollars", and wants to "scrutinize hiring practices" to ensure that "fairness and good ethics are practised in choosing people."

"I would seek input from the people," Roberts said.

Another of his concerns is the need for permanent employment in the community. Roberts said council should actively pursue light industry to locate in the municipality.

"Other communities are getting these industries," he said.

Roberts also criticized council's decision to have a rental building constructed in the industrial park with LEAD program funds. He said the move interferes with the private sector and "I think that is wrong."

Ward 2 incumbent John Parish responded with an explanation of council's intentions for the LEAD funded building. He described it as a "breeder factory" that would allow light industries to get a start and then move on to construct their own buildings in the industrial park once they become firmly established.

Parish emphasized his record of service on the museum board and various council committees during the past three years, and stressed his commitment to ensuring that new jobs are created in the community.

"We've got to have industry here, and that's why I'm on council," Parish said.

Next to speak was deputy reeve candidate Bob Nichol, who emphasized his youth, energy and determination to work with council for the betterment of the community.

Incumbent Ward 3 councillor Lloyd Leadbeater and Ward 5 councillor Glen Hodgson, both back on council by acclamation, also made brief remarks to the audience before the microphone was turned over to the second of three deputy reeve candidates, Bill Davis.

Davis emphasized the experience and knowledge he has gained as a member of the Dysart et al planning board for the past three years, and said that as a member of that committee "I have strived to bring equality to all ratepayers."

Davis said the person who wins the deputy reeve seat on November 12 should have the potential to become "the next leader of this council at a later date."

He promised that if elected he would be available "at any time" to talk to ratepayers, and that if a question is asked, he will answer it, even if the answer may not be what the questioner wanted to hear.

Ward 4 incumbent Sid Cooper, back in by acclamation, then had an opportunity to thank the people of the area for their continued confidence in him.

Deputy reeve candidate Harold Bannon, who is making a comeback attempt after stepping down before the 1982 election, sought to allay concerns about his age and health. He said his health is good, and drew hearty laughter when he said "I look, and am, younger than Ronald Reagan."

Bannon said Dysart needs a deputy reeve with proven ability and the time and experience to serve the people's interests.

Chronic care beds, the need for an airport and a more comprehensive road paving program topped his list of concerns.

Bannon said he has "a special pride for Dysart", and will "give 100 percent effort to ensure that your interest are represented."

Incumbent councillor for Ward 1, Dorothy Baker, said she has enjoyed her term on council and is looking forward to the next three years.

Reeve Murray Fearrey, who is also back in by acclamation, used the occasion to mention some of council's achievements in recent years, and to justify its decision on the LEAD project, which he said will create 20 jobs in the community.

The question period which followed a coffee break was relatively tame, with most of the interest being directed at board candidates.

Among the topics dealt with were the public's right to take concerns directly to the board rather than to committee level, hiring from within the system rather than from the province as a whole, the increasing tax burden on local property owners, and the need for a written code of dress and behaviour from the administration of J. Douglas Hodgson Elementary School.

Councillors were questioned on the possibility of preferential hiring policies for local contractors who tender on county jobs, and council's efforts on behalf of the local tourism industry.

Minden by-law is reviewed

ing a total, clear picture to the taxpayers."

Three public meetings were held about the changes in the official plan, Lehman explained, and anyone wanting to look at the plan just has to go to the municipal office to ask for one.

After lengthy discussions about procedures, there were only three specific complaints about zoning changes.

A case in point was Marion and Ormande Kentner's complaint about the re-zoning of their land on Soyer's Lake.

They have owned the property for years and have not subdivided it. Previously, their property was classified as residential with limited services. Under the new by-law they are zoned as rural while all their neighbours remained classified as residential.

"Our main concern is their changing our zoning is not consistent with all the other people on the lake," says Mrs. Kentner. "Because you haven't made some divisions in your land, it shouldn't mean that you are jeopardized. If we find we want to do something we shouldn't have to have it rezoned."

Council noted their complaint and said they would look into it after the meeting. They said they would not pass the by-law until everyone's concerns were addressed.

Realtor Bill Payne, who had attended the previous meeting, said council had done a good job of addressing his complaints and should be congratulated for their cooperation.

Another complaint was not about a particular zone but about the quality of the maps used to show the different areas. They are old and do not show specific landmarks and roads that have been there for some time.

New maps would cost the municipality $100,000, Lehman explained, and while the Ministry of Transportation and Communications' maps are more detailed, they are not useful for showing lot severances.

Most people seemed satisfied when they left the meeting, still trying to comprehend what the changes would mean to their property and what they could do with it.

"I think they tried to do their best," said David Farrell, who had asked at the beginning of the meeting for clarification of the changes. He pointed out that since property rights are not entrenched in the Charter of Rights, all the meetings may one day be in vain. "I don't think it's going to be settled here," he said.

Few issues in Snowdon

council's representative on the Local Employment Assistance Development project, saying it is "extremely worthwhile endeavour for the county."

The longest speech of the evening came from incumbent school board trustee George Simmons, who used the occasion to explain to ratepayers some of the reasons why the education portion of local property taxes is rising more rapidly than municipal levies.

He said assessment per pupil is very high and grant ceilings are low, so a substantial portion of costs are passed directly on to local ratepayers. The board has requested a meeting with provincial officials in an attempt to have the area funded in the same way as northern Ontario boards, but so far no progress has been made.

Simmons noted that he has turned his mileage money back into scholarships for Snowdon Township youngsters.

In the question period which followed the speeches, two main issues arose. Communications between council and ratepayers concerned some of those present, who felt that public meetings should be held at various times in the year so that residents could discuss matters of mutual interest with council.

There was also some controversy over the location of a sand/salt pile which township road crews will spread in the winter months. It has been placed on the unused railway right-of-way, and some residents are unhappy with it, feeling the salt may threaten wells in the area.

A delegation is expected to attend council's next meeting to present their views formally.

Museum gets grant

A total of $2.6 million for 201 museums across Ontario was announced recently by the Honourable Lily Munro, Minister of Citizenship and Culture. The Haliburton Highlands Museum was among the recipients, getting a grant of $15,462.

Funding for community museums is based on standards introduced last year in consultation with local museums and provincial organizations, Munro said. The standards outline specific development and upgrading of activities such as research, collection records management, staff training, exhibition and conservation standards and organizing of educational programs.

Advance polls tallied

With the municipal election falling on a Tuesday, an advance poll was conducted on Saturday so cottagers and part-time residents would have a chance to vote.

In Dysart et al, the largest municipality with 10,990 eligible voters, 99 people turned out to the polling station in Haliburton while 14 voted in Harcourt. Every board of education seat, the Ward 2 council seat and the deputy reeve's chair all are being contested.

Candidates for Anson, Hindon and Minden are fiercely battling it out though in some races, the issue seems to be personality rather than specific municipal concerns. Out of a possible 5,634 voters, 218 turned out at the advance poll.

The airport and Hall's Lake trailer park proposals are the main issues in Stanhope Township. Who was running for what position was a bit unclear at the beginning but things have been sorted out since then and the 183 people who arrived at the advanced poll, out of 3,879 voters, knew exactly who they were voting for.

There is only one seat being contested in Sherborne et al and that's the highest seat of all -- township reeve. Kel Stone is challenging incumbent Dalton MacDonald to get the majority of the 2,998 possible votes. At the advance polling, 124 people marked their ballots.

It is the opposite in Lutterworth where the reeve's chair is the only seat uncontested. Past reeve Ron Gambell, who did not run again, is being replaced by veteran councillor Bill Valentine. Of the 2,970 eligible voters, 176 turned out at the Lutterworth advance poll.

It's a full slate in Cardiff where every seat is contested from the reeve's to the school board incumbent's. Many candidates are running for the first time but reeve Mac Peters is going against the deputy reeve, Ross Duncan. The Cardiff municipal office says it has a roll of more than 2,000 voters and 304 of them turned out for the advance poll.

Glamorgan voters, on the other hand, are voting for only one council seat available. Walter Hawes and William Dobson are the two names on the ballot. Of the 2,610 eligible voters, 15 were out to the advance poll.

There are three council seats up for grabs in Monmouth. Two incumbents, Jim Deterling and Dwayne Tighe will be fighting to retain theirs and are receiving opposition from Gary Stoughton, Joyce Barris, Joanne Coumbs and Larry Strong. Seventy-two people turned out at the advance poll out of a possible 1,973 voters.

After the deadline for nomination papers, there was one seat open in Snowdon. That's when Bill Powell, Doris Robertson and Keith Schrader decided to go for it so the three will be battling it out for the one vacant seat. There are 1,667 eligible voters in Snowdon and 20 of them turned

Cast your vote

The campaigning is almost over. Some ratepayers already have cast their votes in advance polls, while most others have made up their minds about how they'll mark their ballots next Tuesday. By late Tuesday night, it will be known who has gained the public's favour, and who has been left out, perhaps to try again three years from now.

Inevitably, there will be disappointment for those who fail to win, but they may also gain some satisfaction from knowing that democracy has been served.

Those who have let their names appear on the ballot have performed a useful service to the community. Now it is up to voters to do their part and ensure that the election is worthwhile.

There are interesting races throughout Haliburton County, despite the fact that a substantial number of people are back in by acclamation, whether because of public apathy or because councils and trustees have done a meritorious job.

In Sherborne et al, incumbent reeve Dalton MacDonald, who served as warden of the county this year, is being challenged by Kel Stone, a resort operator in the area. In Stanhope, the race for reeve, deputy reeve and council has sparked lively discussion among ratepayers and enabled a number of significant concerns to be aired, including the proposal to pave and otherwise improve the Stanhope airport, and the matter of a trailer park for a Halls Lake property. On both issues, ratepayers have petitioned council without marked success, and the election has provided people with an important opportunity to express their views in a public forum.

The race in Cardiff Township also is a lively one, with incumbent reeve Mac Peters facing a challenge from his former deputy reeve, Ross Duncan, and council seats up for grabs.

Perhaps the most remarkable evidence of political involvement is in Bicroft, where a dozen candidates submitted nomination papers for four seats.

In Minden, personalities as much as council policies are playing a substantial role in the election process. The race for reeve has pitted councillor Gary Kenney, an outspoken candidate who has published his views on a wide range of topics not strictly confined to council, against Sinc Nesbitt, a former reeve who hopes to make a comeback. Incumbent deputy reeve Ed Pergolas also faces a challenge from Brendan Berube, who has been an outspoken critic of the way the rural and native housing program operated in the community.

Incumbent councillors in Minden also face a challenge from people who want an opportunity to serve the municipality.

The Dysart et al race will not be easily decided, since three men are seeking the deputy reeve's chair, eight candidates are vying for five seats on the board of education, and incumbent Ward 2 councillor John Parish faces a challenge from Miles Roberts.

In voting for five trustees, ratepayers will face a crucial decision. The board of education is arguably the most important publically elected body in Haliburton County, and if it, and the system it governs, are to flourish, there must be wise and concerned leadership at the board table. There are no simple solutions to the problem of rising education costs, and whoever holds a trustee seat must be able to think not merely of dollars, but of the consequence of cut backs and new expenditures. The time is fast approaching, perhaps in the next three year term, when the board will have to make tough decisions about closing schools, and convince ratepayers that higher taxes are a small price to pay for a society that equips young people not only with job skills but with the ability to think and feel and act responsibly.

In choosing a deputy reeve, voters must consider the merits of experience versus those of change, and the leadership qualities of the people involved.

Election '85 is indeed a serious matter. Voters should do all they can to ensure that the people they vote for are worthy and well-considered.

Editorials 'unjust' to Glamorgan

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

I would like to comment on your recent statements in the Editorial section of your paper.

First I believe there is still a great amount of interest in local politics in Glamorgan Township and all municipalities throughout Haliburton County. I for one congratulate anyone for seeking a position either on municipal council or as a school board trustee. I realize the opinions you expressed were your own and I do not intend to point my finger at any one person or any number of people.

I feel you were very unjust in your first two articles dated October 9 and October 23. Having been fortunate enough to be elected to council since 1976, I can justly say that I have not worked with anyone who in their own right have not contributed a great deal of knowledge and input, whether at municipal level or county.

I do not believe that comments like yours such as "not well educated", "most worldly" or "incompetent" will enhance the interest or desire of ratepayers to put their name forward for a position on municipal council.

When it comes to being acclaimed, which I was this term along with many of my fellow candidates, I feel it was not a matter of "Apathy", but ratepayers understanding that their elected representatives are obtaining the best dollar value for the size of their Township and the funding available.

In closing I would like to thank you for your editorial dated October 30. At last you seem to have the insight to understand municipal politics and reasons why some ratepayers are not desirous to stand for a municipal position.

R.I. [Bob] McCausland, Reeve
Glamorgan Township

Editor's note: The paragraph in the October 9 editorial to which the writer refers did not say "not well educated" or "incompetent". It said "Why then, do so few of the most competent, best educated and most worldly people in the community contest municipal elections? One answer may be that such people are too busy with their business affairs to spare the substantial amount of time that public office demands. It may also be that they simply have no desire to face the burden of problems that are always heaped on the shoulders of local politicians. But unless more people take an active interest in municipal and school board affairs, and are willing to let their names appear on the ballot, the future of grass roots politics looks increasingly bleak."

The airport record

To The Editor:

Permit me to submit this open letter to the voters of Stanhope.

At the Stanhope Meet the Candidates Night on Saturday, October 26, it was suggested that those who are opposed to the airport just don't know what they are talking about. I'd like to set the record straight as it applies to me. I was a part owner in the Barrie Airport for five years and can speak with personal knowledge of the financial ups and downs of running one. To have been taken over by the municipality would have solved most of our problems - but even such a viable community as Barrie with its wealth of already well-established industry, C.G.E., Radio Shack, Mansfield Rubber, Black & Decker, etc., was unwilling to take the risk.

Were you able to attend the Meet the Candidates Night? If not you missed an opportunity to learn a little of how things are run in Stanhope.

This past summer the council has been presented with two petitions - one regarding a trailer park on Hall's Lake, the other regarding the airport. Both have been ignored. You would have learned that the subject matter of the petitions and the legitimate concerns of the citizens signing them was secondary to the 'way' each was presented. You would have learned that 200 plus names on a petition in Stanhope is considered 'not very many' when compared to the 3879 names on the voters list. (When the election results come out check that 200 plus against the actual turnout.)

You would have learned that $40,000 of our 1986 taxes have already been committed to the airport by our present Reeve without even consulting his 1986 council. When asked by the Chairman of the Airport Committee if the $40,000 discussed in 1985 could still be counted on, our Reeve replied, "Yes", and no further explanation was given. That confidence for you!

You wouldn't have learned how many Stanhope taxpayers use the airport. A pointed question asking for this information was answered with a

From time to time we are confronted by television, radio or by the newspaper, with people out to give us a pitch to help this worthy cause or that worthy cause with a cash donation. Some of these appeals are legitimate ones while others are not. When you send money in it's always a question as to whether the funds will get into the right hands. Several people in the Haliburton County area have been sending money each year to a company that sells greeting cards by handicapped artists. Dorothy Baker, who represents Ward 1 on Dysart council, stopped me on Friday to give me an article that appeared in the Peterborough Examiner recently on this subject. She also told me that she had been sending in money each year but after hearing the details of where the money has been going, she said they have received their last dollar from her. According to the Examiner article the company that sells these cards took in more than $3 million last year but paid out only $80,000 to Canadian artists, says the CBC television program Market Place. Rehandart Canada Ltd., part of an international association of artists who use their mouth or feet to paint, supports only six Canadian artists, three of them full time, according to Market Place. The company sends out unsolicited packages of cards twice a year, asking for $4 in payment. Although no one is legally obligated to pay, about 825,000 Canadians responded in 1984, says information obtained from R.L. Pol and Co. Ltd., Rehandart's mailing house. The Market Place investigation was sparked by a London Sunday Times article last year that said most of the profit from the sale of the greeting cards goes to a company in Lichtenstein, a well-known tax haven just north of the Swiss Alps. So what does it all add up to? The people from Market Place recommend that consumers ignore the unsolicited greeting cards or mail them back where they came from collect, according to the Examiner article. It's getting near Christmas - buy from those you know best - your local merchants.

Don Lloyd has named his new laundromat "Parkside Coin Wash" with the Grand Opening coming up very soon. The new building, located behind the Kennedy Surplus store in Haliburton, should prove to be a great asset to the village.

Our hats are off to the council of the Municipality of Dysart et al and its employees for the wonderful job they are doing on the lakeshore property on Head Lake from the town dock to what is better known as the first crossing. The landscaping on the slope from the highway to the lower section will look just as beautiful when the grass starts to come up through as early as next summer. A new sidewalk has been constructed from the town dock to the first crossing and we understand that flower beds will be set a few yards apart on the sidewalk. This new walk will serve as a great advantage to the boys and girls who walk to and from the two schools at the far end of town. It's also great for all those who like to walk and jog.

Don Pople of Curry Motors Limited was telling me on Saturday that he had just returned home following a week of General Motors meetings in Calgary, Alberta. He went on to tell me that he also had the opportunity to take in one of the Calgary Flames hockey games at the Saddledome. It was a real treat as the opposition for that evening was Wayne Gretzky and the Edmonton Oilers. The Oilers won a great game before a sellout crowd and the great Gretzky had a goal and four assists, not bad for an evening's work.

Still on the subject of hockey, we are sorry to report that Kim Emmerson badly damaged his knee while playing in a local Industrial Hockey League game at the arena in Haliburton on a recent Monday evening. It seems that he lost his balance and ran into the boards, breaking one of his knees in five places. He was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital in Peterborough where he stayed for five days and then returned home. Let's hope that Kim will soon be back on his feet in the very near future. We also heard that another player came out of that game with some cracked ribs. What ever happened to that non-contact sport? Two games are played every week at the arena in the men's league and the games are fast and well worth watching.

We are sorry to report that Bill Findlay of Haliburton is at present a patient at the Red Cross Hospital in Haliburton and we hope that it won't be too much longer before he is able to be out and around again. Just recently Bill, accompanied by his daughter and son-in-law, was on a one day trip to Peterborough and dropped in to Lindsay on the way to do a little shopping and to look around. They stopped at a food outlet and bought some apple turnovers which apparently contained nuts. Bill, who is allergic to any foods containing nuts, was faced with an immediate reaction and within minutes his face started to get puffy and his throat started to swell. He was rushed to the Ross Memorial Hospital by car. According to the doctor in charge, Bill would have been dead by the time he reached the hospital if he had to wait for an ambulance. They had him there just in time by car.

POINTS OF VIEW

One bad hunter spoils the bunch

The view
from here

Harvey M. Clarke

Suppose you'd put in a very long sunny Saturday working away at all the things that are on your 'before winter' list, in spite of the fact you'd really been tempted to just bask in the last of this season's warm-you-through weather.

But it was nearly four o'clock and you figured you could punch out early and still have time for a walk in the woods with your wife, your granddaughter, and your new puppy. Most of the leaves have fallen, but it's still pretty to look around you at your woods. Nice country. Ninety-five acres of it. How come you always seem to be slugging away on the couple nearest the house?

And, just as you put the tools up in the shed, you hear shots - just over the hill from your home. There are roads through the property, but both sides have just been carefully posted with the new red circle 'no trespassing' signs, plus a few with writing on them for good measure.

Now, the property is posted 'Hunting with permission only' because the brother-in-law says he can come up to shoot this way when he wants to and if you don't do it this way then nobody can hunt on the property. Or at least those were the rules back ten or twelve years ago when the property was first posted.

"Don't worry," he says. "No law-abiding hunter would come on your land if you post it this way. He knows that either you hunt or you're letting someone hunt your land. This way, the only hunter on here will be me, and you'll know when I'm hunting, so you'll be a lot safer."

Wrong, Jim. I drive up the centre road through my property, on the hill behind my home. There I see a red pickup truck, and a man in a red hat is dumping his used shells onto the road. I sure wish my brother-in-law was here to handle things.

He's a big fellow, with the style and bearing that goes with being a retired lieutenant-colonel. And he's the one that likes to hunt my birds, anyhow...

I point out that the property is posted. Our visitor smugly advises me that the road isn't mine, and that he is legally entitled to shoot on the road if he sees a bird. His accomplice then shows up and tells me that he can go onto my property if he wants -- as long as he is pursuing a bird he thinks is injured. When I tell him I might have been walking on my property with my grandchild and my dog (to say nothing of my wife) if I'd stopped work a little earlier, he said I'd have to be 'pretty stupid' to do that. And gets in his car and wheels away.

The surly young sidekick is driving, slowly at first, then hits the gas to shower the hood and windshield of my little truck with gravel. Well, it HAD BEEN a pretty nice day...

I should have known anyone smug enough to hand me his business card after he'd just thrown the corpse of a bird -- one who had made the mistake of stepping over my property line -- into the back of his truck would know his rights. And the OPP confirmed them, provided he was on the shoulder of the road or in the ditch. And of course you'd have to be there when the shot was fired to be sure...

I hope you don't think this is an anti-hunting story, because it isn't really. Every hunter I've told about this talks about the bad apples that spoil the barrel, and I tend to believe them. Nothing just like this has ever happened here over all the years before. And I sure hope it doesn't happen again...

While it is quite clearly within the letter of the law, which I must say I find truly amazing (does the buckshot know it has to STAY on the road?), surely any thinking human being in a relatively sober state would look around him and see that the people who live here really didn't want him shooting. It's the attitude that makes this such a sad situation.

This guy sells real estate. Do you suppose when he sells a property, he hands over the deed and says, "Well, it's yours now, but just remember: if I ever want to come shooting up around the edges, the law says I can do it. And if it bothers you, that's tough."

Mice '85 Club bound to flourish

Northern Lights

Virginia Muenzel

Letters...We get letters...We get stacks and... Well, I did get one. It's my first real fan letter. If the truth be told, it was the mice that got the letter. They're also getting the phone calls. I am coming to the conclusion that mice are taking over Haliburton County.

I guess I've opened a Pandora's box. And it was chock full of mice. Ever since I revealed my problem to the public in general, we've been hearing from folks in Lochlin, Boshkung Lake, Minden, etc. But, the other day I got the cutest letter from a very nice lady in Wilberforce, who seems to have enrolled me in the "Mice '85 Club of Haliburton County". From all indications, it's bound to have a thriving membership. So, as one must answer their fan mail...

Hi Ho Yourself...Carolyn:

While I was practically ecstatic upon receiving a letter from a reader...(hope Len was duly impressed), I sure am sympathetic to your plight...I mean being as distraught as we were over the unbelievable population we discovered residing within the walls of our barn, one can just imagine how you must have felt upon having a face to face confrontation with the little beggars...In bed yet!

Thirty-one mice is quite a haul. We now have fifty-some hash marks on the barn wall, and counting. Unfortunately, we haven't even made an impression on them. They were so bad, at one point that my hens refused to lay another egg. They were getting nervous and jerky from having mice running across their backs as they perched for the night.

Now, while I hate to be a bearer of gloom and doom, I suggest you keep a sharp eye on your cat. If kitty starts acting curiously, for instance sitting around staring at the walls while turning it's head from side to side (like it's listening), it is. And you know what that means. You'll be setting peanut butter traps in your attic all winter. And heaven help you if you should miss one of them. I've heard horror stories about how one dead mouse can out-smell a whole bag of rotten potatoes.

But keep the faith, Carolyn. All plagues come to an end eventually. By the way...Does your cat have fleas?

Thanks for the letter,
Ginnie

Admissions of a junk food junkie

Sunny
Side Up

Martha Perkins

Sit down. Brace yourself. The four-letter word I am about to type is so utterly despicable that I am afraid the weak of stomach may not take the shock.

Diet.

Ughh. Gasp. Yuck. The typewriter threatens to spit out the paper. But alas, the word is still there and I am forced to continue.

I hate diets, and people hate me when I am on a diet. The passion to lose weight overwhelms me and I think of nothing else. My whole world is consumed with watching people eat and loathing the skinny ones who peel back the wrapper to a chocolate bar without a care in the world. Whether I was hungry or not, whether I wanted a double scoop of Heavenly Hash in the first place, every time my mind said no to my stomach my hatred towards the world grew.

The flipside of this neative emotion is that I love food. Eating is one of my favourite occupations in the whole world. My jaw muscles are the best exercised part of my whole body.

If something has sugar in it, shivers go up my spine. If it has starch, my stomach jumps up to my throat and a tear comes to my eye. If it's fried, I'm a pile of mush. This is why, to me, the crueler is one of the most perfect sources of eating entertainment the world has ever known.

First is all that freshly baked dough, melting away as it slides down your throat. Then to give it that crispy outside layer, it is lovingly dropped into a pan of boiling grease, giving it just enough time to soak up all that liquid goodness. As if this weren't enough, in order to heighten the pure ecstasy of each tiny bite, some considerate person brushes it with sugar, filling in all the nooks and crannies so no crumb goes untouched. Each bite tastes as if I die and go to heaven.

Did you notice how quickly I changed the topic from the nastiness of life to what we are put on this earth for? It happens to me all the time when I diet too.

One time, my Mom and Dad, my brother (huge teddy bear that he is) and I decided to go on a diet. To show our seriousness about the matter, we chose the Scarsdale diet. No foreign government could ever inflict such torture.

Every day, as we sat around the table eating our steamed tomatoes and single leaf of lettuce, we'd talk about the first thing we'd eat when we got off the diet. (I ate an entire box of Captain Crunch cereal in one sitting while my brother inhaled a litre of chocolate ice cream.)

Then Mom asked the simple question: If you were on a deserted island, and all your nutritional needs were taken care of by this miracle water, what is the one food you could eat day in and day out until you were rescued?

Mom said french fries. Dad said Kraft dinner and wieners. Michael said chocolate. Since I was half crazed by the diet, I said peaches. Now that I am older and wiser, I join Michael with my vote of chocolate.

How are Chinese tribes treated?

Question

by Catherine Denholm

In the southern part of China along the Burma, Vietnam border live some 50 different nationalities. These are some of the native people who have been in isolated valleys in the mountains for many, many years - the equivalent of our Indians and Eskimo.

In the past these tribes of darker skinned people, who spoke strange languages and who had different cultures from the rest of China, were mistreated. As armies marched through to and from the border they took the food and killed the people. Some tribes were almost decimated.

Now the government of China recognizes the richness of these various cultures and is helping the people to recover their lost crafts and to preserve their heritage.

Last year when travelling through China we visited the Dai people of Zing Hong, a small city of 50,000 on the Makong River eight miles from the Vietnam border.

To reach this city we had an hour and one half flight from Kunming, the nearest large city, to Samoa, a small military airport, then a four hour drive through the mountains along the old Burma Road. Zing Hong is a busy, pleasant, thriving place. The streets are not paved. The two-storey houses are rudimentary - the people live on the second floor with the animals underneath. The whole city, complete with water buffalo, pigs, cattle, chickens and geese, was clean. The farms on the rich, tropical river delta surrounding the city provide plenty of food.

We were entertained to dinner in a Dai household. The meal was prepared by our hostess and her neighbours on a small fire in the main large room. We sat on low stools around low round tables while an amazing variety of food was put before us with smiles and laughter which helped us overcome the strangeness of our location.

The host and hostess welcomed us to their home - their words interpreted to the Chinese then by our Chinese interpreter to us. The Dai people have retained their original language.

My daughter bicycled around Zing Hong for a day almost causing traffic problems with the wagons, trucks, tractors, water buffalo, bicycles and the few cars. These people were not accustomed to seeing strangers from other lands. Every time she stopped she was quietly surrounded with smiling, curious people.

We saw the schools which were crowded with happy looking, well dressed, shy children. The one child one family rule in the rest of China does not apply to these tribes. So many were killed that they are encouraged to regain their numbers.

Upon our return to Kunming we were taken through a post secondary college for these particular nationalities. They are educated for positions throughout China and at the same time their own crafts and culture are taught and emphasized.

The members of the Chinese Women's Union, who had planned our tour through their country, took us to this almost inaccessible part because they were so justifiably proud of what their government was doing for people who had suffered and been misunderstood for centuries.

We found ourselves thinking about the sad state of our own Canadian native people.

You wouldn't have learned why taxes in Stanhope exceed those in neighbouring municipalities even though the tax base in Stanhope could be considered ideal and is the envy of those municipalities.

I hope you have learned that it's important to vote. The council we elect this time around is what we get for the next three years. At least we Stanhope have an election this year. With so many of our neighbouring townships declaring acclamations we have an almost complete slate.

In closing I would personally like to thank all those public spirited citizens who have allowed their names to appear on the ballot. Win or lose on November 12, every one of them deserves our sincere appreciation.

To The Editor:

Once again it has come to the time of year which brings me to think about the welfare of our wildlife. It saddens me to imagine the number of deer that will die a painful and unnecessary death.

For what reason should these creatures be put to death? Is it out of necessity; because someone needs its carcass for food or out of self defense; because someone was ferociously attacked by it? No! Most deer are killed for the sport of it; the great annual sport of hunting; a fine manly sport!

What I don't understand is why hunting is even considered a sport. I see sport as pertaining to a game, match or competition whereas the outcome of winning is a prize, trophy or perhaps prestigious recognition. In the sport of hunting the ultimate outcome of winning is death; the brutal and unfair murder of an innocent animal who did no one any harm and who contributes to the beauty and freedom of our wilderness.

Hunting is not a fair sport! It puts an unarmed and defenseless animal up against a man, with every gadget and murder weapon legally available to him. Men go out in packs to search out, track down, stalk and destroy one of our wilderness' most endearing creatures.

We have allowed the words "hunting" and "sport" to cover actions which if done under their right names would be seen for what they really are - gross violations of the rights of animals and ethics of man.

SPORTS

Emmerson gets 16-1 win

Emmerson Lumber set what may be a goal scoring record in the Haliburton men's hockey league on Monday night as they blasted an undermanned Haliburton Lumber 16-1. On the previous Wednesday, Emmerson Lumber had less success however. They lost 5-2 to a strong Bishop and Wilson team.

Gary Burtch led off the scoring for the surveyors less than five minutes into the opening period, with help from Rob Abbs. At 7:51 of the period Ken Riley replied for Emmerson, assisted by Mark Hollands, to tie the score.

Bishop and Wilson moved into the lead with a little over a minute left in the period on a goal by Phil Barry, assisted by Brian Mulholland and Steve Barker, and they remained in front for the rest of the game.

In the second period, Andy Barrons scored for Bishop and Wilson to make it 3-1, but at the half way point, Tom Ballentine notched an unassisted goal to move the lumber team back to within one goal. It was as close as they could come however. Bishop and Wilson shut the door for the rest of the period, and added two more goals in the third period to cap a 5-2 victory.

Scoring were Greg Bishop from Jim Burke and Steve Barker, and Burke from Abbs and Bob Woodcock.

The Monday night game was no contest, as Haliburton Lumber, with only two men on the bench to provide some relief for tired skaters, could not hold off the two complete lines of Emmerson Lumber.

Joe Roberts was the top shooter for Emmerson, notching five goals. Ken Riley, Dean Curry and Mark Holland each had three goals, while singles went to Tom Ballentine and Wayne Ellison.

Haliburton Lumber's only goal of the night came at the 15 minute mark of the opening period, when Drew Carey beat Kevin Finch in the Emmerson net with help from Ron Murray and Rick Wood.

Emmerson Lumber went on a scoring spree in the Monday game of the Haliburton men's league, putting 16 goals into the net of Haliburton Lumber, who were undermanned that night, with only two players on the bench to spell off their weary teammates. No one seemed too upset about the lopsided score, since in this case exercise, and not winning, is the main reason for playing.

Debler Driller Novice split two games

The Haliburton OMHA Debler Driller Novices earned a split in their past two outings, falling to Woodville 10-4 on Sunday, October 27 while rebounding with a resounding 13-0 victory this past Sunday at the Dysart Community Centre against Little Britain.

The Woodville contest was closer than the final score indicated as the score was 5-3 early in the third period. Woodville responded with five straight goals to put away the victory. Scoring for Haliburton were Jackie Morrison with his first of the year on a fine passing play with Mark and Kevin Morissette. Jonathan Bishop converting Andy Billings' rebound, and Kevin Morissette with two goals assisted by his brother Mark, provided the other Haliburton scoring.

This disappointing loss proved to be a character builder for the boys. Responding to the challenge of playing as a team the boys came out fired up on Sunday.

Peter Brohman set the stage for the victory as he made a dazzling glove save on a Little Britain breakaway on the first shift of the game. He later made another breakaway save en route to his first shutout of the campaign. His defensive mates, spurred on by coach Roger Bain, played standout defensive positional hockey and cleared the puck out of Haliburton's zone with authority.

Jeff Teatro, Ryan Bolton, Andy Billings and Curtis Bain were solid on the point. Bain also contributed a solid offensive display, assisting on four Driller goals.

The Driller goals were evenly balanced between the two forward lines as every forward scored at least once.

Jonathan Bishop opened the scoring, assisted by Mark Stamp and Curtis Bain. Stamp then collected his first goal from Mark Morissette. Bishop completed his hat trick scoring twice assisted by Stamp and Bain and from Andy Billings. Kevin Morissette scored his first goal assisted by Mark Morissette. They reversed the honours seven seconds later with Mark Morissette scoring.

The third period was all Haliburton as the Debler Drillers scored seven unanswered goals. Mark Stamp scored his second goal of the game on a breakaway as his hard wrist shot found the corner of the net. He was set into the clear with a nifty

Beachli-Walker Bantams blast rivals

The Beachli-Walker Bantams hosted Little Britain last Friday night and swamped them 16-2. The Huskies, after some heavy hitting and aggressive forechecking in the first period, led the visitors 2-1.

Goal scorers were Jaro Cooper from Erin Nicholls and Drew Mitchell from Jeff Francis and Erin Nicholls.

Unable to withstand the pace, Little Britain completely folded as the Huskies outscored them 14-1 in the last two frames. Gavin McKnight played strongly in net. Scoring for Haliburton were: Nicholls unassisted, Francis from Nicholls and Mitchell, Nicholls from Cooper, Nicholls from Cooper and Rydman, Paish from Russell and Warburton, Paish from Russel and Warburton, Nesbitt from Nicholls, Nicholls unassisted, Nicholls from Russell, Warburton from Cooper and Perrin, Cooper unassisted, Warburton from Nesbitt and Mitchell, Nicholls from Rydman, and Perrin unassisted.

The referees did a good job and handed out seven penalties to Haliburton and four to Little Britain. The Huskies play two games at home this week, on Wednesday night at 8 p.m. and Friday, November 8 at 8:30 p.m.

Remember, Friday night is Hockey Night in Haliburton.

OMHA Atoms suffer first loss of season

On Friday night Haliburton's OMHA Atoms suffered their first loss of the season.

Jeff Black opened the scoring at the three minute mark of the first period with Greg Stamp and Derek Wilson drawing assists. But before the period ended Oakwood scored five in a row.

Both teams had chances in the second period but neither of them scored.

At the beginning of the third period Oakwood added two more to give them a comfortable seven to one lead.

In the last five minutes Jeff Black connected for his second of the game with Greg Stamp and Paul Hewitt drawing assists. Derek Wilson then scored with Jeff Black getting the assist. Final score was Oakwood 7, Haliburton 3.

On Saturday the boys travelled to Cannington and came away 19-2 winners.

Scoring for Haliburton were: Greg Stamp with five goals and five assists, Chris

Ontario needs way to deal with PCB's

Ontario Naturalists

Ontario desperately needs a state-of-the-art facility for treatment and disposal of hazardous wastes. The recently announced selection of a preferred site for this facility is an important step toward that goal. For the longer Ontario is without such a facility, the more we are - and will be - exposed to hazardous wastes.

Every one of us - men, women, children, birds and fish - lives, breathes, drinks and moves about in a huge chemical soup. The basic broth has been there since time immemorial, providing the very sustenance for life. But, over the past two centuries or so, "we" (society) have begun to add vast numbers and quantities of chemicals to that soup.

It has been estimated that perhaps 500 'new' chemicals are added to our technological repertoire each year. And this doesn't include the progressive - in some cases, exponential - increase in quantities of already-used chemicals.

Together, they constitute an enormous load of, ultimately, waste which must be disposed. Many of our more responsible waste generators do their utmost to ensure safe disposal. Others do not. Either way, so long as comprehensive, state-of-the-art facilities are unavailable, wastes will continue to go somewhere. Some find their way into ordinary dumps. There are delightful stories around Ontario of 'magic ponds' that have been filled over and over with liquid industrial wastes which simply disappeared into the ground - presumably into sand and gravel aquifers, to resurface one day in wells or springs. Other waste finds its way into insecure landfills, sometimes on the sides of valleys, or onto gravel roads - along with waste oil used to keep down dust. Or it's surreptitiously dumped onto roads or fallow land, and into streams and lakes.

And the effects are by no means localized. PCBs, used widely as an ostensibly-contained coolant in transformers and other electrical components provides an excellent example.

In the absence of suitable disposal facilities, provincial law requires indefinite storage of askorols and other high-level PCB wastes: The result is a rag-tag collection of barrels, drums and transformers - some of them doubtless leaking - stored thither and yon throughout the province.

PCBs don't quickly decompose, and if incompletely destroyed by too-low combustion temperatures, produce even more insidious byproducts. Unlike many other chemicals, PCBs are mobile in the environment, volatilized to be carried by the wind, borne in water, and accumulated through the food chain.

HAVE entertains: Performers talents help Gambian village

By MARTHA PERKINS
Staff Reporter

The Haliburton Highlands Secondary School was the scene for some excellent entertainment and demonstrations of goodwill towards the less fortunate, when the Help a Village Effort (HAVE) organization sponsored a variety show on Saturday night.

Admission was free but during the intermission people were asked to contribute money in appreciation of the artists' talent and the efforts of the HAVE committee to help people in Third World countries. The result was that $618.50 will go towards the drilling of new wells in the Gambia, where the new chairman, Clarence McInerney spent the past year teaching.

The evening began with several songs sung by John Miller, accompanied by Melissa Stephens. Miller's strong and unwavering tenor voice filled the auditorium and while he was used to singing with Nancy Robichaud, who was ill that evening, his talent, combined with Stephens' was enough to earn his audience's applause. Stephens also had some time in the spotlight as she played two solos, an Andre Gagnon composition and Debussy's 'Clair du Lune'.

During the break that followed their performance, McInerney spoke about the Gambia, an African country 20 miles wide and 200 miles long in the western 'bulge' of the continent.

The Gambia has a few products but not enough for foreign markets and like its neighbouring countries, is suffering from a famine. In the villages he visited, people had to walk for miles for water and few children had a desk in school, let alone a chair.

"They need water," he said, since the tidal waters reached halfway up the river that travels the length of the country. "They have a different culture, different religion but overall, they are our brothers."

Melissa Stephens was back on stage for the next act which also featured Ken Hadley and Rick Vaughan playing their saxophones. The two jazz number they chose were easy going and they followed them by playing a baroque sonata adapted for the sax with a little bit of help from a synthesizer and electric piano made to sound like a harpsichord. The mix of old and new worked quite well together.

After the intermission, Glen Carter, Ken Hadley, John Miller and Rick Vaughan took the stage with their collection of barbershop quartet songs. The four men looked as if they were having as much fun as the audience as they harmonized their way through some of the oldies but goodies.

Barbershop quartet had toes tapping

Before the final act appeared, Richard Stouffer gave a wonderful ragtime solo on the xylophone, moving his hands deftly as he tapped out the music. Then Ken Hadley and Melissa Stephens returned yet another time to play the 'Summer of '42' theme song, with Hadley on soprano sax.

They were, in a sense, the quiet before the storm, for the next act certainly changed the rhythm of the evening with their eclectic choices of music from reggae to the haunting sounds of a native ballad.

Mary Stouffer sang a song which her husband, Richard had written especially for the evening.

With their reggae to ballad rhythms, this group of talented entertainers was a definite crowd pleaser at the Haliburton Artists' Variety Evening sponsored by the Help a Village Effort committee on Friday. From

"We're watching someone else's pain and it's tearing us apart," she sang, reaching out into the audience to make it feel the message of trying to help someone else's suffering.

Another song of Stouffer's which was performed had originally been written for a benefit concert for the Ethiopian famine relief.

In Gordon Monro's song, Unity and Diversity, written and sung by Monro, he sang of how important it was to retain our individuality while binding together in goodwill. The reggae beat added to the power and conviction of his message.

Other performers in the group were Ellen Hadley, a back up and solo singer, Ken Hadley, and William Sherwood on drums and keyboard (they also performed a song he had written).

At the end of the show, emcee John Stouffer thanked everyone for coming out and also thanked all the guest performers who volunteered their time to help HAVE.

Sherborne must choose a reeve

By MARTHA PERKINS
Staff Reporter

Voters in Sherborne et al will only get one vote this election, and Kel Stone seems ready to make that one vote a very important one.

The owner of the Hollow Valley Lodge and Tavern in Dorset has thrown his hat into the ring for the position of reeve, going against Dalton MacDonald, who is just finishing his year as county warden.

"I would like to see the township run with a common sense business approach," Stone says. "The main thrust of my platform is towards the controlled development of the area."

In excess of 85 percent of all of our lands belong to the crown, he says, and some overall plan must be devised so that these lands can be opened up and their potential realized.

Advance polls quiet

out at the advance poll.

Finally, in Bicroft, where there are only 648 eligible voters, 13 of whom are trying out for a seat on council, it's a large slate in the county's smallest municipality and candidates are giving it everything they've got. At the advance poll, 40 people showed up.

As for the lands that have already been opened up for cottage development, he feels "council should do a better job communicating with the non-resident citizens." He suggests a mailed-out bulletin, explaining council decisions and telling people of future issues. Cottagers only get up here on weekends, he added, and that's the one time the municipal office is closed. It's even hard for working people to get into the office as it follows regular working hours, he says.

He decided to run for reeve instead of councillor, he said, because he wanted a voice on county council. "We're kind of in the northwest corner and don't seem to be in the mainstream. I would like to see stronger representation on county council."

In the last election he was defeated as deputy reeve by just two votes, he says.

In the past, he has not been happy with some of the decisions made by council, especially their lack of support in trying to stop the Dorset school from closing down. Stone headed up a committee to fight for it, and says they did a study on the effects on the economy, educational quality, financial viability and community support.

Other issues are some of the planning expenditures. "Two years ago a by-law and the preparation of a by-law was long and expensive," he says. "There are still revisions being made to it because it was done by a city planner. The township should have its own."

Before buying the Hollow Valley, Stone was in the senior management of Sears Canada for 13 years, employed as the national training manager. He was also a buyer for the company before going on to Sinclair College where he was in marketing.

"I've had extensive business and corporate experience. I think I can approach the job with a great deal of enthusiasm and I have the leadership skills required."

For MacDonald's part, he is running his campaign based on his experience for two years as deputy reeve, three years as reeve and this past year as warden.

"There's not much I can say we're going to do except keep the roads in good shape and move the roads department," he says. His insight into the workings of both councils and his good working feelings with the other members will help him face upcoming issues, he says.

One thing that he says has to be changed is some of the zoning by-laws.

Jury is out in Hebert trial

By MARTHA PERKINS
Staff Reporter

The nine man, three women jury of the Bernard William Hebert murder case will begin deliberating today after hearing two weeks of evidence in a Lindsay provincial courtroom.

On November 24, 1984, the bodies of Joan Hall, 28, and her two-year-old daughter, Nadia, were found in a home in Eagle Lake. Their throats had been slashed. Hebert, Hall's 24-year-old estranged common-law husband, was charged with two counts of first degree murder.

During the trial, presided over by Supreme Court Justice T.P. Callon, evidence was heard that Hebert had talked about killing Hall and his daughter and then committing suicide. He said Hall was seeing another man and wouldn't allow Hebert custody of Nadia. Hall also had a ten-year-old son, Kyle, from a previous relationship but he was not in the house when the murders occurred.

Sharon Upton of West Guilford testified that on the morning of the murders she received a phone call at her home from Paul Thompson at his family's restaurant in West Guilford. He asked her to talk to Hebert, who he described as depressed over family matters.

Upton testified that Hebert said he couldn't stand seeing his wife with another man and was thinking about killing himself and his daughter.

In reply, Upton told Hebert that killing anyone would only begin his problems because he would have everlasting torment in hell.

On Wednesday, November 21, Hebert also told Mike's Milk clerk Christine Warburton that his wife had left him and he thought of killing his wife and child. She recalled telling him he was crazy because Hall was innocent and no one deserved to die. The next day, Hebert came to the store again, Warburton said, but he was in much better humour and had talked to his wife about their problems.

Hall and Hebert's relationship began in December of 1981 and Nadia was born the next October. The two broke up in mid-November, 1984, and Hall and the two children were living with her mother, at Eagle Lake. Hebert was living in a cottage on Pine Lake.

At 4 p.m. on the day of the murders, Haliburton taxi driver Erick Witzke was asked by Hebert to drive him to the Chipmunk Trailer Park but on the way Hebert changed his mind and asked to be taken to his cottage. Hebert again changed his mind, asking Witzke to make a detour to Eagle Lake, stopping two driveways before the house in which Hall was living.

Testimony said that Hebert entered the house, finding Bryan Coppin, a friend of Joan Hall, and Hall in the kitchen with Nadia sleeping in the living room. Kyle had gone out to play.

After walking past the two, and then back into the kitchen, Hebert grabbed Hall from behind, holding a knife at her throat. Coppin was told to leave, which he did, running to the next door neighbour's and phoning the police. When he returned to the cottage he saw Hebert running out. Inside he found Hall and Nadia with their throats cut.

When the ambulance arrived, the two were both dead. Mark Schell, a volunteer ambulance attendant, testified that when he entered the living room he discovered the body of Nadia lying face down and he had hoped she was just sleeping.

The court also heard that after the murders, Hebert tried to slash his own throat. At 6:30 p.m. he arrived at the home of Richard Fielding, just east of West Guilford, close to Hebert's rented cottage. Fielding convinced Hebert to go to the hospital and during the drive there, Fielding said Hebert told him he had killed his wife and child. Hebert had first said he had cut his neck on some barbed wire, but then said he had tried to cut himself with a knife but it wasn't sharp enough. He also admitted to Fielding that he had burned down his rented cottage.

The drive ended at the trailer park and police, searching the area around County Rd. 1, found Hebert with the help of tracking dogs. One of the dogs got loose and caught up to Hebert in the woods but it did not bite him. Minden OPP Constable Barry Connelly, who was chasing the dog, jumped over the dog and onto Hebert's back. Hebert's wrists were forced behind his back and the handcuffs were applied.

CAT Scan fund tops $2 million

The Peterborough Region CAT Scan Fund Committee announced last week that it has raised more than $2 million, $1,682,000 of which has been received in cash, and the balance of $318,000 in pledges.

The committee says they are "overwhelmed with the tremendous generosity of the four and a half counties involved - Victoria, Northumberland, Haliburton, Northern Hastings and Peterborough, who have provided literally thousands of volunteers and over 23,000 contributions."

"Every part of every community in each of the county regions put a great deal of effort into helping raise the total dollars!"

Donations from Haliburton County have totalled $31,171.33.

All approvals from the various bodies have now been received and the actual construction and installation will commence almost immediately. The equipment is being stored in a special tractor trailer awaiting the transfer to the site at Civic Hospital.

"SCAN PURR-R" will be dedicated with a ribbon cutting ceremony in mid-January. Miss Angeline Robbins of Bancroft, who provided the winning name, will cut the ceremonial ribbon. A suitable opportunity will be provided for viewing by the media, the volunteers and the public.

Chocolate indulgences

Let me tell you some of my horror stories about chocolate. One day, just after Christmas, my boss at the pharmacy I worked at in Lindsay gave everyone a three-pound box of chocolates. The delivery boy and I never got past the bench on the sidewalk. In less than half an hour, we ate between us a pound and a half of chocolates. Then we went to the chip truck at the corner. When I arrived home for dinner, I sat down and ate as if nothing had happened.

My sister Pat, the messy one I was telling you about, once spent her Christmas vacation taste testing all the different brands of chocolate. Whenever I go to spend the night, we get a huge chocolate bar, the one with the strawberry filling is best, and two cruellers each and then go home to complain how fat we are as we gloss through fashion magazines.

When I returned home to Haliburton after my birthday, I brought with me a box of After Eight mints and a bag of cheesies (my family knows the way to my heart). For two nights in a row, guess what I had for dinner?

My problem is that in my vocabulary, there is no such thing as a half a bag of chips, or a half-eaten cake that can last all week for dessert. It's all or nothing for me. The final result is always an empty bag so I figure it doesn't matter how soon it is emptied.

The word diet is also no longer part of my vocabulary. Life is too short to waste on denial. Without food, I'm an emotional wreck, prone to suffering terrible withdrawal symptoms, even worse than Sue Ellen's on 'Dallas'. Let the other half be skin and bones, I'm warm and cuddly (my friends still can't understand why I'm not a blimp).

Do you know what my ultimate goal is? I figure that by the time I reach 75, or younger depending on the state of my health, I will have lived a long and fruitful life. My body will have been through a lot and it will be time to give in to the pleasures of the soul. The last few years of my life will truly be the best, for this is when I plan to devote myself to eating.

Instead of a grapefruit for breakfast, I'll have a Laura Secord French and Frosted chocolate bar. Toast will be replaced by butter tarts. Sour cream and onion chips will be my luncheon appetizer instead of salad. A plate of onion rings and french fries will follow. By dinner time, it will have been at least eight hours since my last chocolate bar so I'll have another around six. If there isn't one around I'll have some chocolate floating island (chocolate cake floating peacefully on a sea of chocolate pudding).

And then you'll really see the true me. For the truth really is "Behind every moderately trim body is a fat one trying to get out."

Field trip to Quebec City approved

A regular meeting of the Haliburton County Board of Education was held in the Board Office on Tuesday, October 22, and the following matters were considered:

The board approved the request of the Haliburton Ministerial Association to accept Flora Jean Phillips and Louise Leonard to give religious education instruction in elementary schools in the county.

Approval was given for a field trip for students of the J. Douglas Hodgson Elementary School to Quebec City during April, 1986. The board is to receive a detailed agenda and other materials as required by board policy at least one month prior to the trip.

A motion of the Huron County Board of Education was supported. It stated "that the Huron County Board of Education petition the Ministry of Education for permission to place home schooling students on enrolment records so that they may attract appropriate provincial grants to help offset the very substantial cost of supervision for these students."

Kim Stamp was granted a two week leave of absence - February 10 to February 21, 1985, without pay, providing Doug Devolin agrees.

McKay Brydon, principal of Archie Stouffer Elementary School, reported on behalf of the committee for revision of elementary school student progress reporting. He explained the revisions to the report cards that his committee was recommending for Board approval. The recommendations were approved.

Dale Robinson, Curriculum Coordinator, gave a detailed report of his development of a needs statement. This statement identified the curriculum needs in the county and the course of action that would be taken for the next number of months.

David Villard reported on the activity of the computer advisory committee. The committee has established goals, and identified a method of collecting data which will assist them in preparing a recommendation to the board concerning computers in the classroom, K-13.

Leonard Salvatori reported that salary negotiations are in progress with the CUPE representatives and are proceeding favourably.

Ross Anderson reported that the Special Projects Committee reviewed the following topics at a recent meeting: day care centre at the Dorset School, special needs students, French instruction, position of administrative assistant, home schooling, and individual school enrolments.

The board did not grant the request of Mrs. Jane Scholer to establish a day care centre in the Dorset Elementary School.

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

Just to set the record straight, in response to the headlines in last week's paper. I would like to maintain a less critical approach and touch only on our effectiveness in office. After a careful review of our workloads it appears I have worked more hours over the past three years for Haliburton Highlands and Stanhope in particular than my two critical opponents combined. As for taking the extra day to reach a decision on where to serve, for me this was serious decision which I didn't take lightly, and I needed all the time available.

Elgin Stouffer,
Deputy Reeve of Stanhope Township

School grants to increase

Provincial grants to Ontario's school boards will increase by 5.4 per cent in 1986, Education Minister Sean Conway announced last week.

Operating grants to the school boards will total $3,322.9 million, an increase of $171.1 million over the 1985 allocation of $3,151.8 million. The total includes $3.5 million for the first year of a three-year, $13 million fund for co-operative education and transition to employment programs. Funding for special education programs will continue to be identified as a separate grant in 1986.

The 1986 grants include a four per cent increase to cover inflation, and Conway said it is his intention to limit the increase in the salary and wage component of the per pupil grant ceilings to four per cent.

He reiterated the Treasurer's position that inflation has stabilized at four per cent and that school boards are expected to act accordingly in establishing their 1986 budgets. He said the 5.4 per cent increase in grants for operating expenditures should enable the province to maintain the rate of provincial support for education.

In addition to the 5.4 per cent increase, an additional $107.3 million will be made available in 1986 to cover the cost of separate school extension, Conway said.

The Government will increase its cash-flow payments to school boards to seven per cent during the first three months of the calendar year, up from the current first-quarter level of 3.6 per cent. This is expected to help alleviate the cash-flow pressures on local school boards by reducing some of the borrowing costs they have incurred in recent years to meet their first-quarter cash requirements.

Joe Graham wields power of suggestion

He can make you do the unbelievable

By MARTHA PERKINS
Staff Reporter

A hand goes to the girl's head and as soon as the magic word "sleep" is spoken, her eyelids close and her head drops down.

"When you wake up you are going to feel very relaxed," says Joe Graham. "But when I say the word cigarette, the seat of your pants is going to feel very hot."

A snap of the fingers and the young girl is awake again, seemingly totally unaware that she has just been put into a hypnotic trance.

Joe Graham turns and talks to one of the other woman volunteers for his show. "Would you like to stop smoking cigarettes?" he asks.

Everyone's eyes turn toward the young girl, and sure enough, there she is popping out of her seat, tenderly rubbing her behind. The audience breaks out into appreciative laughter.

Fact or fantasy, rigged or spontaneous, explainable or unbelievable, Dorset's Joe Graham makes a living putting people into hypnotic trances and using the power of suggestion to do things beyond their control.

He starts by working his crowd. On a recent Saturday night he was in Midland entertaining a hundred "Y'smen" from around the province and their spouses at the annual convention of these supporters of the YMCA.

Some people have seen his act before and jokes ripple around the room. "Watch out, Joe might make you disappear." "I don't want to volunteer because I don't want to take my clothes off." The skeptics lean back in their chairs treating the show as a type of April Fool's joke the others are too gullible to see through.

To put them at ease, Graham starts out with a few simple card tricks. One man in the audience chooses two cards from one deck and puts them into separate pockets. Another man shuffles a different deck and gives them to Graham.

The hypnotist is silent as he tries to catch the description of the cards from thin air. "The card in your left hand pocket is the two of spades," he says and the man obligingly pulls the two of spades from his pocket.

The Graham tells the other man that he will find the two of spades in his deck between the five of hearts and the queen of clubs. The audience gasps as Graham is indeed right.

He was willing the man to shuffle the two of spades between those two cards, Graham later explains. If he had told him outright, the man wouldn't have been able to do it. But the subconscious works in mysterious ways.

The next trick seems even more complex and unbelievable. A woman volunteer comes up to the blackboard and writes down three numbers, the largest being on the left. Then she reverses the numbers and subtracts one from the other. The answer is then placed at the top of the board and she is asked to do the same thing again, only this time adding the numbers. She complies and waits for her next instruction.

Graham tells her to go to a handy phone book, look on the page of her first number, and then go down the same number of telephone listings as her second number. The finger trails down the right page and she concentrates on the name and number.

Once again, Graham stands on the stage and the audience can almost see the thought waves crossing the room.

The chalk starts scribbling away as Graham writes his answer on the blackboard. He thinks a little longer, asking the woman to concentrate on the last four numbers and soon he has his full answer.

Graham's answer is there for all to see and then the woman miraculously reads out the same number and name from the telephone book. The skeptics say it was rigged but later in the evening the woman will deny that there were any tricks involved.

"I feel that I can get to a person's brain," Graham says in an interview. "I sense out the picture and the person is like a television, the receiver."

Explaining how the letters and names come to him is even harder. It would be like any one of us trying to explain the colour red to a blind person. We could say it is vibrant or warm, but the English language has not provided us with the tools to fully express what we see when we see the colour red.

Graham's apparent ability to pick up subconscious messages is not always foolproof and sometimes he makes mistakes.

"For everyone you get right you get 10 other feelings for something that isn't," he says. "I haven't got the skill to tell the true from the false."

had a migraine all of her life and Graham hypnotized her to not be aware of it. Another woman was depressed and irritable. By hypnotizing her, Graham found out that she was depressed about a teenage problem. Stopping people from smoking is a favourite trick.

We all know the subconscious exists; our dreams tell us it is there. Why else would we dream about a person we haven't seen in years or discover that what we dream one night comes true the next day?

What Graham is able to do is tap into those subconscious thoughts, making them as tangible as the spoken ones. And he can make people absorb what he wants them to believe.

Why Graham has this skill while others don't is something that baffles him. Though he wasn't aware of what he was doing, or that others couldn't do it, he found he could make people do things he wanted them to do at the ripe old age of 10, when he was living in his native Belfast.

"I could put people to sleep but I didn't know what I was doing," he remembers. "I usually found at school I could persuade them to do things." He even got himself expelled from school for hypnotizing the teacher.

Early school days were a breeze because of his facility for remembering things. But anyone will tell you that memorization is not the same thing as learning. "The teacher thought I had lots of brains but I didn't." School was a bit harder to get through when he reached the upper grades.

After checking the country out, he decided to move to Canada in 1967 to find work in the construction business. "Could you pick any place better? It's the best country in the world. Everywhere else there's a problem."

And so he moved to Dorset with his wife and two children, finding a nook in this tiny community. As people got to know about his skills as a hypnotist, he was asked to perform.

The larger the crowd the better, for with more people you have more luck tapping into at least ten people's brains. "When I go to a party and there's half a dozen people, that's when I'm worried," he says.

One thing he doesn't like doing in a large or small crowd is regression, or taking people back into their pasts, whether in this life or another.

"If I took you back to another life, at a spot where you were really happy, then you'd never want to come back," he says. For those who don't believe in reincarnation, and Graham's not sure what it is, he tells the story of a young man he took back into his former life in the 1700's.

The young man had dropped out of school at an early age and had no knowledge of Spanish. Yet when Graham took his back to his former life he was a sailor on a Spanish ship, explaining how many crew members were on board and what they were doing at the moment. He told part of his story in Spanish.

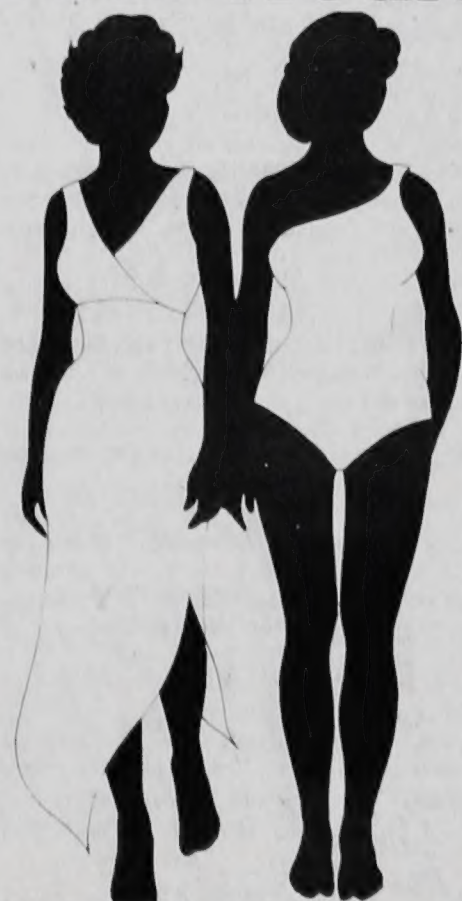

A woman in the audience who knew a lot about Spanish history asked Graham to ask the young man who was the ruler at the time. When he replied, the woman confirmed his answer.

The man's friends say there is no way he could have known who the ruler was or that he had had

An unforgettable swim with a killer whale

'I can picture the whole scene again'

By R.D. LAWRENCE

On a morning in June, 1972, I crouched on the deck of my 24-foot boat and prepared to dissect a wolf-eel, a seven foot long creature of the Pacific that is not an eel, but a fish. With melon-sized head, great round eyes, and two inch long fangs, this animal resembles more a nightmare than a wolf, the only similarity to which are the great teeth.

My boat was moored in a small, deep bay off Princess Royal Channel, in British Columbia's Inside Passage, at a latitude of 52 degrees 56 minutes North and about 110 nautical miles south-east of Prince Rupert, a location I had selected because of its inaccessibility and isolation. There I planned to dive so as to study the bottom-dwelling organisms in order to compare their size and condition with similar marine dwellers found in the polluted waters of the Strait of Georgia.

The first evening following arrival, I had set out to catch a small salmon for my supper and accidentally hooked the big wolf eel, which subsequently was impossible to shake off the hook. Intending to free it on board and return it to the water, I managed to row my dinghy to the stern ladder of the Stella Maris while dragging my unwelcome captive; but, once I hauled the fish aboard, it fought so hard that I reluctantly killed it. So as not to end its life uselessly (I did not fancy eating the beast!) I decided to dissect it and record my findings for later publication, but because by the time I finished subduing the fish it was almost dark, I postponed the dissection until the morrow.

'Orcas are highly intelligent mammals that will readily make friends with humans'

Under brilliant sun and blue skies I breakfasted on deck the following morning and afterwards prepared to open the fish, but just as I was about to make the first cut, I heard a strange sound coming from the water on the port side of the boat, a noise rather like that of a person letting out a long, deep breath. Startled, I looked up. And I became even more startled!

The maker of the sound was a 24-foot killer whale, or Orca, as these fascinating marine mammals are more properly named. It had risen within some eight feet of the boat and as I looked over the rail, I was in time to see the small cloud of exhaled breath as it rose above the sea. Then I found myself staring into a large, fixed, black eye, more human-like than anything I had ever seen before.

As the whale floated placidly beside my boat, I was torn between rushing for my camera and continuing to watch this unexpected, but most welcome visitor. On impulse, I cut a two-foot piece off the dead wolf eel and tossed it towards the Orca. The offering landed a couple of feet in front of the whale's blunt snout, but it hardly had begun to sink before my new companion moved forward and opened his mouth at the same time, ingesting the food as a person might eat a cocktail cherry.

Encouraged, I cut off another, smaller piece of fish and tossed it towards the whale. This time he caught it in mid-air. Before I had quite finished hacking off another chunk of food, the Orca had swum to the side of the Stella Maris, had allowed the lower part of his body to sink vertically in the water and then, as I leaned over the rail, offering in hand, he "stood on his tail", fanning his huge fluke so as to push himself upwards, great mouth agape and showing the yellowish, conical teeth that stud the upper and lower jaws, each some three inches long.

Without having to reach, I dropped the piece of fish into the bull whale's mouth, which closed on the prize with a loud, hollow sound. Now the whale submerged. I thought he was leaving. Seconds later, however, he surfaced again a little closer to the boat. Once more he stood on his tail, rose with open mouth and accepted another piece of fish.

For three weeks, Klem, as I was to name him, called almost daily, sometimes coming twice a day. He continued to accept fish from me and, when I plucked up enough nerve to get into diving gear and go down with him, he put on a show of aquatics for my benefit that I shall never forget. Initially, he came at me like some huge, black-and-white torpedo, causing me to believe at first that I was going to be rammed by some eighth tons of whale that was probably travelling at about 30 miles an hour! But, at the last minute, Klem veered away gracefully. The water he displaced as he turned caused me to tumble about like a cork tossed into a waterfall.

When I finally righted myself it was to see Klem coming at me again, but this time swimming on his back! As he neared me, he turned over, then went straight up to leap out of the sea. My view of his great body shooting upwards, bursting through the surface, then returning with an enormous splash is so vivid that I can virtually picture the entire scene again as I write about it.

Klem proved to me by his actions that Orcas are not the killers that man has made them out to be. They are, instead, highly intelligent mammals that will readily make friends with humans if they are given a half a chance.

Being predators, they kill in order to live. For this reason, man has maligned them, dubbing them vicious and even claiming that these docile whales go out of their way to attack humans. That an Orca such as Klem is quite capable of biting a man in half if it so wished is beyond question. The fact is that these wonderful mammals are harmless to humans.

The largest known male Orca was 32 feet long and weighed about ten tons. More usually, males reach a length of between 20 and 26 feet and weigh between six and eight tons, while females attain a length of between 17 and 21 feet and weights of five and six tons. At birth, calf whales are about eight feet long and weigh an estimated 400 pounds.

Orcas are found world-wide. In Canada they are commonly sighted on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts and along the Arctic coasts, but because of their habit of migrating, following seals and other marine animals that form their major diet, they are at times scarce in certain parts of their range. Mating takes place between May and July and the gestation period lasts 16 months, when, around November and in warm waters, a single calf is born (rarely a cow Orca will have twins).

Rails' End Gallery displays talents of Guild artists at their varied best

By MARTHA PERKINS
Staff Reporter

For the next week, the Haliburton Highlands Guild of Fine Arts is giving residents a chance to see that it is not just an organization to promote art in the community, but a viable source of talent in itself.

The Rails' End Gallery is showing a collection of works by 33 Guild members, a collection that will begin touring Ontario in January.

One of the more unusual pieces in the collection is Kevin Dunlop's 'Mystery Man at my Door', a stunning work of marquetry in which Dunlop has skillfully inlaid different grains of colours of wood into an image of a man, fedora pulled over his eyes, standing near an open door. The work is done on a door itself.

There is a painting reminiscent of the Group of Seven by Murray Stewart, who has captured the beauty of the autumn scenes with his bold strokes and bright colours.

For those who like the more subtle tones, there is 'Trilliums in Bloom' by Dzintra Schlotter or 'And Miles Before I Sleep' by Fred Seedhouse.

Also on display are works of different media such as a wispy cotton weave by Vicki Cross called 'Pine Transparency'. A boldly designed and knit sweater by Maria Van Lieshout is sure to provide inspiration for less adventuresome knitters. While those who enjoy ceramics will appreciate the stoneware and porcelain by Barbara Peel.

The show closes in Haliburton on November 13, but will be shown again in January when it tours Ontario art galleries

Mystery Man at My Door, right, and Early Fall, Kennisis Lake, are just two of the show's fabulous works on display for the next week Whole species have been wiped out primarily because of human cruelty, carelessness and greed.

When will all the killing stop; when there are no more animals left to kill? Then what or who will the hunter turn to as their new victims?

It is time to look at hunting for what it really is! This hunting season leave your guns at home and "Give the Gift of Life".

Bible condemns gays

To The Editor:

I would like to comment on and add to what I read in the Echo two weeks ago by Catherine Denholm. "Is AIDS creating a new morality?" I surely hope so, and no doubt it may for a time since there seems to be no positive cure at present and for the most part AIDS is sexually transmitted. There was some question about sexual freedom being sin and condoned in most churches, well I can't vouch for most churches but I know of one that certainly calls it sin.

According to the Bible it is. First the seventh commandment says, "Thou shalt not commit adultery." Galations Chapter 6 verse 7 says, Be not deceived, God is not mocked, "for whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap." If good is sown good is reaped, but if evil is sown evil is reaped, and more is reaped than sown. Romans chapter 6 verse 23 says, "The wages of sin is death" which can be both physical and spiritual.

I have noticed the moral decline in this world in the last few years is so rapid that it is hard to comprehend. Such things as drugs, alcohol, pornography and sexual perversion are just a few of the things breaking up the family structure as it was laid down by God in the very beginning. One of the greatest statements said "the family is the very foundation of any nation" and the only hope for this world is a return to the Bible and exercise the laws and principles as laid down therein.

Sincerely yours,

ELECT
FOR

TO THE RATEPAYERS OF DYSART ET AL:

Once again it is time to elect the people you feel can best serve the interests of this Municipality over the next 3 years. After careful consideration and thought I have let my name stand for Deputy Reeve.

This Municipality has made favourable progress over the past few years for two main reasons

- (1) Excellent Leadership
- (2) Strong Tax base with all land being privately owned and we receive taxes from it.

Even with these two things in our favour, we must be careful not to over-reach our priorities as well as we rely on Government subsidies for Roads, Parks and other priorities, but with rising education costs and falling subsidies we must set our priorities and adhere to them - to avoid any heavy tax increases.

Planning, Zoning, and in general land division and land use, constitutes over one-half of Council's business. As a member for the past three years of the Dysart Planning and Advisory Committee I have become familiar with the Zoning By-laws and the Official plan, and as a member of that Committee I have strived to bring equality to all Ratepayers. I have as a member of Planning Board, and will continue if elected, to make sound decisions based on all information available to me.

Your decision for Deputy Reeve on November 12th could have lasting effects for some time on this community. The person who is elected should have the potential of possibly becoming the next leader of this Council at a later date.

The Deputy Reeve constitutes one-sixth of Council and must be prepared to work with all council members as well as Gov't. officials. He must also be prepared to stand behind the Reeve at County Council. He must make difficult decisions and be prepared to back them up.

I believe that the experience I have gained from Planning Board - the Willingness to work with the rest of Council - and the excellent leadership from Murray Fearrey AND My strong desire to serve this Municipality will be an asset in the position of Deputy Reeve.

If elected on November 12, I will be available at anytime, for any Ratepayer and if a question is asked of me, I will give an answer, it may not be the answer you want to hear, but rest assured you will get an answer.

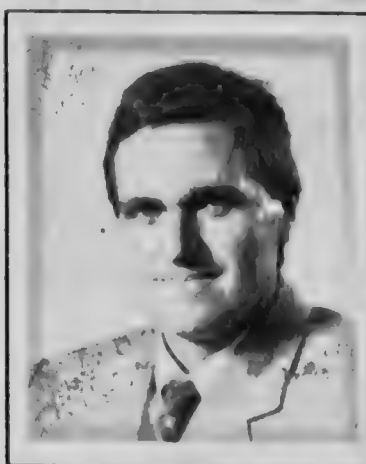

All I ask the Ratepayers of Dysart is to give me the opportunity and the privilege of serving them.

On November 12th Vote for A Positive Step Forward - Vote Bill Davis for Deputy Reeve.

Thankyou

Obituary: Allan Lloyd Coneybeare well-known local citizen

Allan Lloyd Coneybeare of Haliburton died suddenly Wednesday, October 30. He was 66 years old.

He is survived by his wife Rosamond; two daughters, Beverley of Toronto and Linda of Gelert; one son, John, of Haliburton; two grandchildren, Jessamyn and Benjamin of Toronto; and two sisters, Loretta Henderson and Eileen Pripp.

He was predeceased by three brothers, Cecil, Ulric and Irwin.

Born and raised in Haliburton, he attended school here. He was active in minor hockey in his youth and played on the forward line of the Haliburton Huskies for many years.

He joined the R.C.A.F. at the beginning of the Second World War and saw service on many fronts in Europe.

Following the war he and an R.C.A.F. friend, Oscar Yarnold, came back to Haliburton and built the garage which is now known as Bennett Motors on Highway 121 four miles west of Haliburton. The garage was then known as Y&C Motors. A few years later Lloyd bought Oscar's share of the business and re-named the garage Coneybeare Motors. He continued to operate it under that name until a few years ago when he retired and sold it to its present owner, Gord Bennett.

The late Lloyd Coneybeare had a life-long interest in sports and community affairs. He was active in the organization of a Haliburton youth centre several years ago. He was also an ardent hunter and very interested in hockey, baseball and football.

A long-time member of the Haliburton Rotary Club, he served as president of the club in 1961-62. He played a part on many Rotary committees but was particularly active on the Easter Seal and Crippled Children's committees, and with the Five Counties Centre.

He was a member and past president of the Haliburton Legion, a member of North Entrance Lodge in Haliburton, and a member of the Dysart et al planning board.

Memorial services were organized by the Royal Canadian Legion and the Masonic Temple.

Funeral services were held Saturday, November 2 at Haliburton United Church. Interment was at Evergreen Cemetery in Haliburton.

Getting a chance to wear some of the richest materials and designs, local Tina Bailey was one of the several models at the Guild's fashion show.

Legion News

On Sunday, October 27, 34 Legionnaires and friends went to a Service of Remembrance at Brechin. It was a lovely autumn day and the parade and service was beautiful. The wind whipping the many flags of the colour party and the proud Legionnaires marching behind the skirl of the pipes of the Uxbridge Pipe Band created an impressive sight.

At our Remembrance Day dinner we will also have our Honours and Awards ceremonies. If anyone is entitled to year pins, please get in touch with Comrade Mabel Brannigan.

While I was researching a materials for an address I will be giving at the J. Douglas Hodgson Elementary School on Remembrance Day, I came across this passage written by Albert Camus. This quote really made me think about Remembrance Day and the quest for peace.

"Probably every generation sees itself as charged with remaking the world. Mine, however, knows it will not remake the world. Its task is even greater: to keep the world from destroying itself."

Think about Remembrance Day.

The Hallowe'en Dance on November 1 saw a large number of costumed characters cavorting around. The best costume of the night was won by a polar bear, Janet Tice. The best man's costume, Murray Harvey. Most original, Thelma Dair and the best woman's costume, Clark Bailey.

Last Sunday we were invited to Ernie and Hazel Foster's home. While there, the Fosters presented to Joan, for the Legion, a beautiful plaque. The plaque has the Legion crest on a beautiful wood background. This will be a nice addition to your Club Room.

Fashions for the fashion conscious

From country classics to cosmopolitan chic, the Guild of Fine Arts' show featured the best

By MARTHA PERKINS
Staff Reporter

It was an evening of world-class designers and stunning fashions on Friday night at Wig-a-Mog Inn when the Haliburton Highlands Guild of Fine Arts presented Fall Fashions.

The appreciative female audience oohed and ahhed as models hit the runways wearing the newest fashions by such designers as Alfred Sung and Anne Klein. The styles went from understated plaids to bold and colourful prints, each one shooed off to its fullest by the several models.

All of the designs came from Patricia's Gallery and Boutique, a fashionable clothing store in Fenelon Falls owned by Patricia Hoy, the emcee for the show. The jewellery was specially designed for the Art Gallery of Ontario and the makeup was done by Mary Kay.

There were no overall fashion statements, just minor variations to some familiar trends. The paisley pattern was still in evidence, but only used for detail.

These comfortable yet classy separates were popular among the totally female audience at the Guild's fashion show Friday night at the Wig-a-Mog Inn. The newer styles allow women the ease of casual clothes yet are also suitable for relaxed entertaining.

Knits popular designs

Skirts were long and straight or flowing from dropped pleats. With many designs, complimenting shirts and sweaters were left untucked, as much for comfort as giving the clothes a long, straight look.

The knits were perhaps the most popular designs of the evening. Some were hand-knit by Nan McGhee, one of the models, and combined first-class wools and knits with comfortable and easy-to-wear patterns.

From the international designers came beautiful geometric-patterned long wool dresses, with straight wool skirts worn underneath.

There was no one colour prevalent throughout the show, though the popular designs on the whole had rich, warm solid colours instead of prints. Various shades of purple and green had a strong showing but they were not to be overshadowed by the more traditional greys and creams.

At the beginning of the evening, Melissa Stephens accompanied Susan Peel as she sang three songs which delighted the audience.

As a concerned ratepayer I would like to have the opportunity to Serve on the new School Board. If elected I will endeavour to serve fairly and honestly.

Pioneer citizen mourned

Gooderham news
by Mary Hadley

One of Gooderham's pioneer citizens, Christie Ann Madill, died last Tuesday morning at the Peterborough Civic Hospital. She was in her 83rd year.

She had been in ailing health for the last few years. Some months ago she suffered from a broken hip, requiring surgery to replace the joint. She had just returned to her home where she had a stroke and again was taken to the hospital where she died.

The daughter of Arthur and Priscilla McColl, she was born in the Bear Lake area and lived in this settlement all her life. After her marriage she worked hard, as farm life in the early days was never easy.

She is survived by five sons: Willie, Walter, Ross, Gordon and Alfred; one daughter, Ruby Alden; two sisters, Margaret McCarrell of Peterborough and Mirl MacDuff of Gooderham; one brother, Alfred of Eagle Lake; 14 grandchildren and 14 great grandchildren.

She was predeceased by her husband, Bert; five brothers, John, Albert, Sandy, Tommy, and Willie and one sister, Ellen Switzer, as well as two grandchildren, Reg, and Bert Madill.

Visitation was held at the Barr Funeral Home with service in the Pentecostal Church on Friday afternoon. Rev. Roger Sauve spoke words of comfort to the family. Interment took place in the Glamorgan Cemetery.

Pall bearers were: Francis Leveck, Robert Alden, Jim Alden, Larry Madill, Alvin Madill, and Ken McCarrell.

Our community expresses its sympathy to the bereaved family.

Awards were presented to the top students at the Haliburton Highlands Secondary School last Saturday evening at the annual awards ceremony and banquet. Three Gooderham students were among those receiving awards. Cathy Craftchick received an Honour Society certificate for four years of honours. She also won: The Stuart Baker English Scholarship of $100; the Wilberforce Veneer Co. Ltd. Award for the highest commercial programme average and the Mrs. Anna English Scholarship for Business and Commerce - a portable electric typewriter.

Karen Madill attained honours in her two years of attendance. She also won $25 as her Cooperative Education Award.

Both Karen and Lloyd MacDuff had perfect attendance for two years. Congratulations on your achievement. Keep on keeping on!

Last Friday evening electors gathered at the community centre to meet the two candidates, Bill Dobson and Walter Hawes, who are running for councillor in Glamorgan Township. At the same time those acclaimed for office spoke to the assembly.

Dallyn Pickens, who will not seek another term, acted as M.C. He mentioned past accomplishments, such as the building of the foot bridge, tennis courts, playground equipment in the park, road improvements, job creation, etc. He then called upon Bob McCausland, Reeve, who thanked the past council for their co-operation. Deputy Reeve, R. Jane Franklin, was unable to be present due to a former commitment.

Councillor Glen Madill felt that the council was fortunate in the receipt of grant money for their projects and hoped it would be forthcoming this year in order to continue their plans. Sharon Traviss, a newcomer to the council, said she had been visiting this area for the past 30 years and hoped to bring freshness and objectivity with her services.

Cecile Billings, the new representative on the Board of Education, felt that the work would prove a valuable learning experience.

Bill Dobson promised to serve to the best of his ability.

Walter Hawes told that he had retired after 30 years as a plumbing and heating contractor and hoped to contribute to the municipal government.

Some questions were directed to the candidates.

Ivan Hunter expressed appreciation to the council and the office staff for their efforts and successes of the past three years.

Refreshments were served, giving everyone a chance to circulate and meet with each other.

Elsie Belanger, from Toronto, is visiting her niece, Elda Hunter.

Winners at bridge last Tuesday evening at the school were Jim Ross of Wilberforce and our own Faye Silver. Several players from our club attended the bridge tournament in Haliburton, held the last three Thursdays.

Lloyd and Lois McCuaig of Islay were visitors of mine last week.

Congratulations to Ed and Gwen Taylor who celebrated their 40th wedding anniversary last week. Best wishes for continued health and happiness.

Laura Maxwell of Thunder Bay spend several days last week visiting her sister, Mrs. Mae Pickens, and other family members.

The Scottish Country Dancers, of whom our own Dorothy Robertson is one, entertained the Glamorgan Senior Citizens following their pot luck dinner last Wednesday evening. On behalf of the club Gordon Barr thanked them for a delightful evening and expressed the wish that they might return again.

The meetings will now convene at 12:30 p.m. for the winter months. All seniors are invited.

The school pupils enjoyed a Hallowe'en party last Wednesday. This included the nursery school. Everyone, teachers and parents, were dressed in various representative costumes. Little 14-month-old Tommy Bates was happy, dressed as a king. 18 month old Ashley Hunter showed her dancing ability when music supervisor Mr. Glidden provided music and sang. It was a happy time for all.

Don't forget the Hunter's Dinner and Dance, November 9, in the community centre.

Sympathy of the community is extended to Irene Traviss in the loss of her granddaughter, Laura Rowden.

The Chatterbox Girls' Club got off to a good start for the fall and winter months with a costume party last Tuesday. They will meet Tuesday, November 13 from 6:30 p.m. to 8 p.m. and continue each alternate Tuesday. For further information, contact Bonnie Pettit at 457-2051.

Teen dance promises to be fun

Dorset news
by Phyllis Briscoe

"Be good, and let who will be clever, do noble things, not dream them all day long, and so make life and that vast forever, one grand sweet song."

We wish to express the sympathy of the community to the family of Charley Cunningham, who died last week at Huntsville hospital after a lengthy illness. Charley had many friends and acquaintances in the Dorset and Lake of Bays area. He was well known in the business community, being owner-operator of Port Cunningham Lodge for many decades. He will be affectionally remembered by all who knew him.

There will be a teenage dance on Saturday, November 9 from 8 p.m. to 12 midnight at the Dorset Community Centre. There will be chips and pop available and lively music. The event will be well chaperoned and the young people should have a great time. Those between the ages of 12-18 inclusive are welcome.

Don't forget the card party tonight (Wednesday) at the Ridout Community Centre at 8 p.m. A fun night out with the proceeds going to the Dorset Community Centre building fund.

We wish a happy birthday to Angela Berry who celebrated her 10th birthday on October 28.

There is still room on the bus that is taking passengers to the Georgian shopping mall on November 14. The return fare is $10.00 per person. An inexpensive way to do your shopping. Call 766-2458 or 766-2237 for information. Everyone is welcome.

Be reassured that there are still some huge lake trout in Lake of Bays. They were observed last week under the bridge in the spawning beds, by the dozen, and some of them were really immense. It restores ones faith in nature that in spite of acid rain, pollution or what not our lake trout are reproducing in great numbers.

I hope everyone turned back their clocks on the weekend, thereby getting an extra hour of shut-eye. The Dorset Social Club will be meeting on Wednesday afternoons instead of evenings. The change taking place with the change of time, the evenings being longer and a

What is so rare as a bright, sunny day in October? We have had a few very lovely days in the latter part of October. Have we had Indian Summer? I have always understood that that season didn't arrive until we have had a covering of snow and that hasn't occurred so far. And I just heard shocking news on the radio; less than eight weeks until Christmas. We all have calendars and can easily figure out just how close Christ's birthday is, but hearing it put into words makes you sit up and take notice.

The people from Dwight who are taking the bus on November 14 to the Barrie Shopping Mall will be picked up at the Senior Citizens' building across from the Post Office at 7:45 a.m. on that day and the Dorset passengers will be picked up at the parking lot across from the Post Office at 8 a.m. The bus plans on being back in Dorset about 8:30 p.m.

Moose season is over for another year and from reports I have had there were not too many of the wild game animals taken. Maybe I just haven't been talking to the right people but those I did talk to said they hadn't even seen a moose. Do the would-be victims of the hunt have an inherent sense of danger and just stay away from the hunting grounds during the season?

Visitors at the home of Walt and Marion Tyson last weekend were Walt's son Roy, his wife Claudia, Walt's granddaughter Cheryl and her husband Roger Edmonds, all from St. Catharines.

It is always gratifying when a great deal of preparation has gone into the decorating and getting ready for a function to get a good response from the public. This was the situation at the Hallowe'en Masquerade dance held last Saturday to raise funds for the Dorset Community Centre building fund. The decorations in the hall were apparently fantastic, with tombstones with humorous writings on them, coffins, imitation cobwebs all over the place and all sorts of spooky things. The event was well attended and nearly everyone was in costume. The variety and originality of the masquerade costumes deserves mention as it was obvious that a great deal of time and effort had gone into their creation. Thanks to all concerned the event was a huge success.

A baby shower was held at the home of Millie McEachern on Monday of last week in honour of Russel Alex-

Mary Parozanin has gone to her winter home in Florida for a few months. She will be missed at the Tuesday quilting days in the centre and by the United Church Maple Lake congregation. The UCW there is planning a bazaar to be held in December. Further reminders will follow.

Wilma Sisson attended the wedding October 27 at a Greek Orthodox church in Toronto, where her grandson, Rob Evans, and his bride, Linda were wed.

It should be noted that not all of those mentioned last week for honours and awards at the high school were able to be present, but all deserve recognition for their achievement.

A surprise party was held at Alma Morrison's for her nephew, Perry's birthday. His friends, the Nobles of Tory Hill were among those present; also the Percy Drysdales. The Drysdales have just returned from visiting Carrie's daughter, Sandra Lott and her family in the Maritimes.

George and Shireen Cooper of Vancouver are at the Cooper hunting camp for a week.

Many Guilford residents swelled the crowd at the HAVE concert on Saturday evening. It began with John Miller's solos, accompanied by Melissa Stephens. Some of the songs were 'Lucky Be a Lady', 'Once in Love with Amy', and 'If I were a Rich Man' from 'Fiddler on the Roof'.

Rick Vaughan's saxophone solos to Melissa's accompaniment were another part of the excellent musicianship throughout the evening. Melissa performed a favourite piano solo of mine, 'Clair du Lune'. The barbershop quartet of Rick Vaughan, John Miller, Glen Carter and Ken Hadley again gave us great entertainment. It was good to see and hear Ken Hadley again as he performed with exquisite precision on the soprano saxophone. His wife Ellen, Dick Stouffer and his wife Mary, Gordon Monroe and William Sherwood set up together for the final numbers with lots of percussion as the group performed numbers of their own composition. It was great to see Dick Stouffer on the Haliburton stage again and hear him play the xylophone solo with absolute precision and expertise. The HAVE committee is to be commended for bringing so much talent together for our enjoyment.

It is getting closer, everyone. The play of the season. The melodrama is about to be performed. Tickets are available from yours truly, or from Paulette's, the T.D. Bank, Minden, the Store-room, Minden, or any group member.

The next craft day at St. Andrew's will be the 13th, so come along, girls. Show off your craftsmanship or learn how to do something new with fabric or stitchery. Congratulations to Kevin and Bev Sisson on the birth of their son, Joseph Leslie, 8 lb. 9 oz., in Peterborough on November 2.

Erma Sisson is visiting this week with her daughter, Leslie Chumbley and family in Oshawa.

Norland news

Active interest shown

Hi. I hope your week was fabulous. As always, our streets were filled with characters of every description last Hallowe'en night.

Last Wednesday, October 30 an extremely successful 'Meet the Candidates' night was held at the old community hall in Norland. I'd like to extend my congratulations to all the candidates who made excellent speeches. Everyone presented themselves very well. A round of applause to the people of Norland too, who showed by their numbers that they take an active interest in community affairs. An estimated 135 people showed up as compared to a scant 30 people who attended a 'Meet the Candidates' night on the same evening in Lindsay.

Here are last week's eulogy scores, ladies, Mildred Jewell, first; Elva Hannivan, second; Mary Montgomery, consolation; Mildred Jewell, lone hands. In men's eulogy the winners were Jean Montgomery, first; Ed Coppins, second; Doug Taylor, consolation; Margery Fountain, lone hands. In bridge the top three were Helen Gilles, first; Terry Park, second; and Jim Hunter, consolation.

Ladies auxiliary helps the hospital raise money

By MARTHA PERKINS
Staff Reporter

In a small village such as Haliburton, the hospital is an integral part of the community. It may be small, but is reassuring to be able to stay in your own community when you find yourself in need of expert medical attention.

One problem however, is that the smaller hospitals have a harder time providing services which require expensive equipment, forcing some people to travel to the larger centres.

This is where the Haliburton Hospital Auxiliary fits in. Using its corps of willing and dedicated volunteers, it raises money to buy equipment the hospital could otherwise not afford.

When the new Haliburton Red Cross Hospital opened in 1971, the auxiliary was ready and able to begin to help. Early fund raising activities were bake sales, dances and membership tins. The donations started out small with a hair blower and an electric razor among them. Simpsons gave the auxiliary a $500 credit and Dr. Good donated a television set.

In 1974, the group underwent a reorganization and new members were recruited to help with various projects such as knitting, visiting and making table favours and children's activities packs.

A local artist and auxiliary member was approached to draw a design of the hospital to be used on handi-notes which were so popular they had to be re-ordered. Recipes were gathered into a cookbook and sold throughout the community.

The first large donation was in 1975 when a new respirator was given to the hospital. Catherine Wilkinson, who is still involved today and was one of the founding members, made the four yellow smocks the women wear as uniforms.

It was also an important year in the auxiliary's history because an application was made to be provided with a number for memorial donations. People attending funeral homes could now decide if they wanted their money to go to the auxiliary instead of some other organization. Today, the memorial donations make up a large part of the auxiliary budget and have been instrumental in supplying the hospital with much equipment and furniture, such as the 12 chairs and table in the hospital board office.

Another cook book was made up in 1977 and the 200 copies were soon sold out.

In 1978, the women decided to join the Ontario Hospital Auxiliary Association in order to benefit from the experience and ideas of other auxiliaries around the province.

This was also the year in which a showcase was purchased. Located in the front lobby of the hospital, it is the perfect place for the auxiliary to display the handicrafts volunteers have made to sell to patients and visitors. It is now organized by Peggy Bassett. In addition, $1,000 was donated towards the purchase of a cardiac monitor.

To celebrate the Year of the Child in 1979, the auxiliary purchased items which would particularly benefit the young children who had to stay at the hospital. Toys, books, a playpen and a small table were purchased for the pediatric ward and a mural was placed in the labour rooms to cheer up the expecting mothers.

Children were also remembered the next year when an Open House for young school children was started. Grade Two students would tour the hospital, asking questions of the nurses, and trying out some of the equipment. In later years, the ambulance service would also participate, loading some kids on stretchers and letting them take a peek at the interiors of the ambulance.

Not forgetting that these children would be old one day, financing was started on a cardiac defibrillator. In 1981, their project turned towards buying an ultra-sound machine for the physiotherapy department. Not ones to stop after a project was completed, the auxiliary purchased a blood pressure monitoring machine the next year, costing approximately $3,000. They also purchased two small radios.

It was also decided to set up a teenage volunteer corps for the hospital, so young adults could see what work at a hospital was like and gain valuable work experience. The auxiliary purchased the uniforms, caps and pins and set aside $500 for future years.

The green thumbs of the auxiliary came out in 1983 and started working on the landscaping around the hospital, something they still do today. To brighten up the inside of the hospital, Norman Rockwell prints were purchased in 1984 and placed in the emergency waiting room.

When St. Joseph's Hospital took over the Haliburton Hospital, the auxiliary spread their wings too and donated some money to the CAT Scan fund, a fund raising drive that was proven chosen with care so newcomers could see the splendour of the Highlands in the fall.

popular in the communities surrounding Peterborough which could not buy such an expensive piece of equipment by themselves.

Some donations were now being sent to a Haliburton fund at St. Joseph's but if people want to ensure that their money stays in the county, all they have to do is write a cheque made out specifically to the Haliburton Hospital Auxiliary.

In 1985, some of the members began getting involved inside the hospital, volunteering their time to work three mornings a week in the physiotherapy department, running errands or doing some light administrative work.

This October, the auxiliary sponsored a very popular luncheon for the presidents and vice-presidents in this area at the United Church.

Members from as far away as Newmarket and Cobourg arrived to discuss auxiliary business and make executive decisions.

The day was very successful, says president Ellenor Bagg, who helped organize the meeting a year in advance. The Chamber of Commerce provided brochures about the Highlands and the fall colours impressed the newcomers.

For anyone who is about to travel out of the country, Bagg would like to remind people that if they pick up a Blue Cross Health Insurance form at the hospital, Blue Cross will donate 10 cents to the Ontario Auxiliary Association.

The auxiliary's next meeting is November 6 at 1:30 in the hospital board room and anyone interested in joining is asked to attend.

Retired bank manager honoured at local gathering

Coboconk news by Sheila Lake

Joe Heffer, recently retired manager of the local Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, was honoured at a gathering in Coboconk recently. John Kennedy, president of the Lions Club, was master of ceremonies. Tom Callillon, assistant vice president of the area from head office, was in attendance. Mr. Heffer was presented with a clock from head office, and also received a VCR on behalf of his customers, and the community. Bill Scott, MP, was also in attendance and was one of the speakers.

Mr. Heffer has served as manager of the Commerce here for 15 years, coming here from the Little Britain branch. Joe leaves behind many pleasant memories of serving the community here, and though he is living here, there will be many people he will seldom see who were business acquaintances in the past.

A dinner was enjoyed by all, followed by a dance, to end a pleasant time with his many friends here.

Winners in the Coboconk Senior Citizens card games on Tuesday evening are as follows: Euchre - Mildred Jewell, 76; Elva Hannivan, 73; most lone hands, Mildred Jewell, 4; consolation, Mary Montgomery, 50. Men's - Ed Coppin, 70; Jean Montgomery, 71; most lone hands, Marjorie Fountain, 4; consolation, Doug Taylor, 49. Bridge - Helen Gillis, 5350; Terry Park, 4570; consolation, Jim Hunter, 1010.

Clare Fielder has moved into the apartment across the street from his former apartment and is now upstairs over the Frank Real Estate office. Frank Real Estate has moved into their new premises, the former "Now and Then" restaurant, across from their old location.

Remembrance Day is again drawing near. As usual the Legion will holding their annual parade. This is one day of the year that we should remember those who died for the freedom we take for granted in a good country.

And since we do have freedom, get out on election day and vote. So many are not happy with those who are elected, but that person, or persons, would not offer their services as a councillor or civic employee, and so often, do not even bother to vote. Be sure you are not in that category. See you at the polls.

I trust you are avoiding the

CAR CARE SUPPLEMENT

Time to get your vehicle ready for winter

Each year at about this time, we hear the same message: "Are you and your car ready for winter?" And every year, we seem too busy to heed the advice, until the morning after the first sub-zero night of winter, when we call the local garage to report that the car won't start.

If you didn't take advantage of fall days get busy now before it's too late.

All too often, car-owners may think that putting snow tires on is a catch-all solution for winterization. Snow tires are essential to safe winter driving and they should not be overlooked. A great deal more is required, however to safeguard your car for the tough months ahead.

Anti-freeze/coolant

One area that should be of vital concern to you is your car's cooling system. If it's weak or has been neglected, you're running the risk of rust and corrosion in your radiator. Even after only 9000 miles, you could end up with clogged passages and that could mean costly damage. A clogged or corroded radiator for example, will cost an estimated repair bill of $150 - $300, while burned valves and others range from $500 - $700 in repairs.

An anti-freeze/coolant has two specific jobs, to keep the engine coolant from boiling over as a result of extremely high temperatures, and naturally, to keep the engine from freezing during those long, cold winter months.

Battery

The three most common signs of winter car trouble are no-start, rough idle or lack of power and performance, and, in most cases, they can be directly attributed to neglected battery cables or a dirty ignition system. With a minimum amount of tools and experience, the battery can be easily cleaned.

Using a solution of baking soda and water and clean cloth, remove the corrosive build-up around the battery posts and cables. When corrosion forms in this area, it can build up to the point where it insulates the battery cable from the post, and, as a result, the car receives no power.

After scrubbing the deposits away from the outside of the cable, carefully remove the cable from the posts without damaging or prying at the threads. If they are unusually difficult to remove, a special battery cable puller can be purchased.

Next, clean the inside surfaces of the clamps and the outside surfaces of the posts down to the bare metal. Remove the caps on top of the battery and check the electrolyte level. If the fluid is down, use distilled water to bring the fluid back up to the proper level.

The distributor, rotor, ignition coil, dust covers and spark plugs are all components of the ignition system and should be kept free of dust and defects. Wash these components with a cleaning solvent and inspect them for cracks and other defects. If there is a hairline crack in the distributor cap, for example, the component should be replaced immediately. Spark plugs should be serviced and replaced regularly as specified by the manufacturer. Any auto parts specialist can tell you exactly what kind of

In a few weeks, conditions like this will once again challenge drivers and vehicles

Efficient ignition system means sure winter starts

When it comes to motoring, getting started is half the battle.

Since starting your car normally takes little more than one or two seconds, it's easy to assume it's a simple process. Not so.

When you turn the key in the ignition switch, you turn on the starter motor, which is powered by the battery. A small armature on the starter motor turns the crankshaft, which makes the pistons go up and down. This is called cranking the engine.

As each piston is drawn down by the turning of the crankshaft, a mixture of air and gasoline is drawn into the cylinder. Another half turn of the crankshaft pushes the piston up again, compressing the fuel mixture.

At that point, a sparkplug inserted into each cylinder fires and burns the compressed gas. The piston is forced down again by the expanding gases in the cylinder, and the whole process is repeated literally in a flash.

But, as any technician knows, there's many a blank twist key and crank.

For example, the ignition system, which is comprised mainly of a coil, a distributor, and sparkplugs and wires, can interfere with starting. It's usually the first place your technician looks for trouble. A sticking choke is another. Or, your battery may have become weakened and needs replacement.

The thing to remember about buying batteries is to make sure the new one is large enough to do the job. Your owner's manual tells you the minimum size your car needs. However, it may be good insurance to install the largest

Regular care helps car last

Automotive technology has made startling progress in the past decade, but today's cars still must have regular care if they are to give trouble-free operation.

Even though many automobiles need engine oil replacement only every 12,500 kilometres, or every 12 months, the oil change is still a vital part of maintenance. Extended maintenance intervals can lead to an owner forgetting that regular maintenance is necessary for his car's mechanical longevity.

The required frequency of engine oil changes depends on the use to which an automobile is put and the conditions under which it is operated.

More frequent maintenance becomes necessary if an automobile is driven in dusty areas; if it is used to tow a trailer; if its engine is left idling for long periods or if the vehicle is operated at low speeds, like taxis or door-to-door delivery vehicles; or it is operated when outside temperatures remain below freezing and when most trips are less than six kilometres. Turbo-charged engines have shorter oil change intervals too.

CAR CARE SUPPLEMENT

Biggest battery

battery that will fit your car. It's bound to give you an edge in really hot or really cold weather.

Motor oil plays a silent but important role in starting. If the oil is too thick it will make the engine sluggish or turn over and battery draining starts.

Make sure your oil and filter are changed regularly, and ask your technician about the right grade and type of motor oil for your car; he may recommend a thinner oil for winter conditions. You can also check the owner's manual in the glove box of your car.

And finally, remember to turn all accessories off when you start your car to reduce the load on your battery.

Maintenance is key

Cars whose operation falls outside these conditions and which are driven daily for a minimum of 25 kilometres or more (or are driven continuously, not just left idling, for 30 minutes or more each day) qualify for the extended maintenance intervals. And it's essential that engine oil of the proper viscosity is used - check the owner's manual.

Get ready for winter

plugs you need for your car and how much they should be "gapped" for maximum performance. There's no need for any confusion.

One of the easiest and least expensive things any motorist can do is put together a winter emergency traveler's kit. It can save both aggravation and money and could spell relief when a problem arises.

At the very least, here's what your emergency kit should include:

- a sturdy shovel,
- a 15 foot tow rope,
- a flashlight with fresh batteries,
- at least two roadside flares,
- a roll of vinyl or rubber electrical tape in case of emergency hose repairs,
- a set of jumper cables.

Get a car first-aid kit

You've got your snow tires on, and your anti-freeze in. Now, St. John Ambulance suggests you need some basic supplies inside your car. St. John offers a check list of first aid and safety supplies that are a good idea at any time of the year, plus a winter survival kit.

These are suggested basics. You may want to add to them for your own special situation. All the items are easy to come by at drug stores, safety supply or camping supply or automotive stores.

You can improvise some. For instance, clean white towels or sanitary napkins may be used as dressings. Large plastic bags will serve as waterproof coverings.

St. John Ambulance has developed a four-hour First Aid for Drivers course. It covers some basic first aid skills and the first aid management of an accident scene - what to do first, how to get help. For information, contact St. John Ambulance locally or at the provincial office at 46 Wellesley St. East, Toronto, M4Y 1G5.

Careful planning helps cut your winter gas bill

Cold weather does expensive things to your car's fuel consumption, but there are ways to take the sting out of winter.

A block heater can make it easier to start the engine in cold weather. Rather than wasting the electricity to have it on all night, or getting up very early in the morning to plug it in, buy a timer and set it to go on two hours before you need the car.

Once the car is started, don't go back in the house for a second cup of coffee. Even on cold days you are unlikely to need more than 30 seconds to get the car warm enough for driving.

All parts of the drive train must warm up in order for the car to run at peak efficiency, but the transmission, differential and tires will not warm up unless the car is moving. Driving the car slowly for the first ten minutes will give the drive train a chance to warm up.

Tires are also affected by winter temperature fluctuations. With each 10°C drop in temperature tire pressure decreases. It pays to check the tire pressure regularly since underinflated tires make a car use more fuel and are more prone to blow out. Tire pressure can easily be measured with a pressure gauge and is best done when tires have not been used for several hours. Under inflated tires can be filled free of charge at a service station air pump stamped on the tire sidewall.

As most summer radial tires are not efficient in snow, snow tires should be installed. With a front wheel drive car it is best to put snow tires on all four wheels. If the summer radials are fitted on non-traction wheels make sure the snow tires installed are also radials.

Be sure to remove snow tires immediately once the snow is gone in the spring. Their efficiency decreases significantly when not driven on snow.

It's not a bad idea to change your engine oil at least twice a year and one of those changes should be just before winter sets in. As temperatures drop the engine oil becomes thicker, so take this opportunity to switch to a lower viscosity (thinner) 5W-30 oil. At the same time get your mechanic to set the idle speed, timing, and mixture to manufacturer's specifications. This is also a good time for you to check and fill antifreeze and other fluids.

Planning your trips carefully is important in cold weather. Because cold cars are relatively inefficient, short trips, which don't give your car a chance to warm up are expensive. Try to do all errands in one extended trip. And remember not to leave your car idling when running in to do errands - it takes more fuel to leave the car idling than it does to stop and restart it.

Even though drivers tend to drive fewer kilometers in winter months, their fuel consumption does not decrease proportionately. The average Ontario fuel consumption ratio for personal cars varies from 13.1 L/km (21.6 mpg) in summer to 15.6 L/km (18.1 mpg) in winter. Any fuel economy tips implemented during winter will pay double dividends. The average car uses about 630 litres from January to March. At 47 cents per litre, that's almost $300. A 15% saving - possible with care - would net you almost $45.

CAR CARE SUPPLEMENT

Anti-freeze needs regular changing

Nothing is permanent but death and taxes, to misquote an old saying.

And that includes so-called permanent anti-freeze which, when its effectiveness is gone, could at worst spell death to a car's engine and at best tax the owner's patience.

Even permanent-type anti-freeze can lose its effectiveness if it has been used more than a year. This is particularly true if water has been added from time to time over the summer.

Rust inhibitors, generally an ingredient in permanent anti-freeze solutions, tend to "Break down", causing an accumulation of rust and scale in the cooling system.

be replaced. In addition hose connections should be tight.

- Testing the thermostat to make certain it opens at the correct temperature.

- Pressure testing the radiator cap to make certain it holds the recommended pressure.

- Inspecting all drive belts for fraying, cracking or deterioration. Also make sure the tension is proper.

- Checking the water pump for wear.

The owner who neglects his car's cooling system is vulnerable to car trouble.

A study by a major manufacturer

Prevent engine damage

Therefore, to insure against permanent engine damage due to overheating, a fall flushing and installation of new coolant is recommended.

Other basic services for keeping cooling systems in top condition include:

- Checking the radiator and hoses for leaks under pressure. Hoses also should be examined for cracks and sponginess. Defective hoses should of car coolants involving about 1,200 cars showed more than a third of the three-year-old models checked had products of corrosion in their coolants. The percentages were: One year old, 22%; two years old, 36%. None of the cars checked was an "old" car.

Nearly half the cars checked needed some kind of cooling-system service.

Your motor oil has vital job

As well as lubricating moving parts, it helps cool

Of all the fluids that can be found in your car, none is so versatile as the oil that pulses through its engine. Oil has to do its job when the engine is first started on a cold winter morning and it has to work equally well at high speeds on the highway during the hottest day in the summer.

When you pop the top on one of those handy plastic litre containers, you're adding to your car's engine a substance that performs no less than 17 different functions - all of them protective.

This highly refined, multi-talented descendant of the black crude that gushes from the earth is one of 350 lubricating oils that are refined for a wide range of applications.

Things get pretty hot and heavy inside a running engine. Hot metal rubs against hot metal, temperatures quickly soar to the point where parts would melt and fuse together, were it not for a protective layer of oil.

Oil molecules act like liquid ball bearings, separating moving parts, thereby reducing the friction. Still, temperatures can run as high as 800 degrees Celsius, hot enough to damage engine parts. But the oil dissipates much of this heat, cooling the engine and permitting it to run at safe temperatures. In fact, the oil circulation system that envelopes the engine with a micro-thin film handles about 30 percent of your car's cooling duties.

Tremendous combustion pressures build up inside the engine that must be contained. Engine oil seals them in by coating piston rings, liners and piston grooves, preventing a power-robbing condition known as blow-by.

As you can imagine, a heck of a lot of thought goes into making something that's expected to do so many jobs. In fact, there's more high-tech engineering in a drop of top quality motor oil than there is in a micro chip. Basestocks must be specially refined and fortified with a long list of additives, each of which has a specific function. The additives that reduce foaming, rust, sludge and varnish inside the engine are examples.

In addition, there are scuff protectors in the form of antiweld and antiseize additives, wear controllers, formulation to minimize combustion chamber deposits, valve deposit reducers, agents that reduce spark plug fouling, decrease oil consumption and control emissions.

All the ingredients in the recipe work in concert to deliver better fuel economy, because they allow your car to run smoother. But, just like any other component, it only works properly when it's kept in top shape. In the case of motor oil, that means regular changes, including the filter. Be sure to refer to your vehicle owner's manual for the proper type and grade of motor oil to use.

That's a quick course on motor oil - from the ground up, so to speak. Next time you pop a top you'll be a little wiser.

Turbocharger boosts power

Exhaust compressor charges cylinders more fully

It's called turbocharging. And it's an automotive conjuring trick something akin to squeezing a quart out of a pint pot. Hook up a turbocharger to a small engine and the power output can be bumped up to equal that of a much larger, normally-aspirated engine. And it can be done almost without penalty - fuel consumption is increased by a percentage less than the gain in power and mechanical longevity is virtually unaffected when the boost, or pressure in the intake manifold, is kept modest.

One of the big attractions of supercharging an engine with the turbocharger is that it utilizes an otherwise waste product, the engine's exhaust gas. Exhaust gas flowing from the engine drives a small, high-speed turbine which in turn drives a small compressor drawing in either ambient air (in fuel-injected engines) or a fuel-air mixture (as in engines with carburetors). The compressor output is fed to the engine intake ports, increasing engine volumetric efficiency - the cylinders are packed with a charge on every intake stroke - and the power output is increased markedly. A device called a waste gate relieves the boost pressure when it attempts to climb higher than its designed limits, as when the throttle is closed abruptly.

Because of the better burning of the charge which comes with turbo-charger use, combustion byproducts are cut and so engine emissions are reduced.

A side benefit from turbo-charger use is that it, paradoxically, makes for a quieter running engine. As the exhaust gases travel through the turbine they expand, much as they do when they enter a muffler, and so exhaust noise at the tail pipe is noticeably reduced.

CAR CARE SUPPLEMENT

Modern engines high-tech wonder

Automobiles of the 80s and the companies who make them are changing at an unprecedented rate.

The new generation of cars, light trucks and vans that are rolling off the assembly lines are, by far, the most technically advanced, economical and the best engineered in industry history. Smaller, cleaner and leaner running engines have squeezed so much from a drop of fuel that it's becoming next to impossible for engineers to improve mileage under the hood. Instead, they're having to come up with aerodynamic changes for better fuel economy.

Smaller is better

The notion that smaller is better, that sparked the switch from big cars in the early 70s, remains the basis for increased sales of sub-compacts, scaled-down trucks and mini-vans in the 80s.

Until about 1982, smaller also meant less powerful. Fortunately, that's no longer true; the performance engine is making a comeback.

Ten years ago, the average rear-wheel driven family car, whole metal body and frame construction weighed close to 4500 pounds, was powered by a thirsty V-8 engine. Today's front-wheel driven cars are made of light-weight steel alloys, plastics and aluminum and powered by four or six-cylinder transverse-mounted engines.

In order to gear up for the driving needs of the 80s, auto manufacturers have made major modifications to suspension systems and transmissions. Electronics are playing an ever larger part in new car design and construction. And many cars already have onboard computers.

As time passes, and auto manufacturers from different nations share technological know-how, factories and financing, there is emerging what industry-watchers call a "world car", whose design and construction reflect the flourishing co-operation that exists between certain manufacturers.

A uniform high quality

The beneficiary of all this shared enterprise is the new car buyer. Automobile manufacturing and assembly plants, using state-of-the-art robotics, are turning out autos of uniform high quality. It's the age of precision.

Computers now control ignitions, fuel systems, transmissions, air conditioners, heaters, cruise control, braking, suspension, exhaust emissions, and plenty more. Some even talk. Now, if we could just get them to tell us what the industry has in store for us in the years to come.

Regular service saves money

As any car/automotive fleet manager will tell you, the secret to keeping scores of cars on the road is regular maintenance.

It follows that what's good for the big car fleets must also work for you, the one or two car owner.

Spring and fall are the best times to have your technician service your car. Spring because your car has just emerged from a long, cold winter and will soon be baked by the summery sun. And fall because it's about to be assaulted by ice, snow and salt, all over again.

Saves money

Regular maintenance pays plenty in dividends, among them, improved fuel economy - and that's money in your pocket. Properly inflated and balanced tires; a correctly adjusted carburetor; a well-timed ignition system; and an emission control system that's in top shape, all contribute greatly to fuel economy and trouble-free performance.

Another good reason to service your car at regular six-month intervals is safety.

A fleet manager wouldn't take chances with brakes, tires and exhaust systems, and neither should you. Uneven or excessive tread wear, worn brakes and a leaky exhaust system are all potentially deadly hazards that can easily be detected and corrected through regular service.

Next to your home chances are your car represents the largest investment you've made. Twice yearly service protects

Local service stations have the know-how to keep your car working this winter

Computers help more car engines

What has gotten into your technician's head?

These days, quite a lot - thanks, in part, to the technological explosion that is shaking every corner of the automobile industry; and to the growth of consumerism that has spawned a generation of car owners who are more knowledgeable and, therefore, more demanding.

It's obvious that what has gotten into your technician's head is the realization that he has to keep pace with these changes or he won't be your technician for very much longer.

Daily, his world is changing. Cars are getting smaller, more fuel efficient, electronically more complex. The computer age has arrived.

A new era of smart cars, whose computers control fuel delivery and ignition; emission and climate control; transmission, suspension and brakes is here.

In fact, you could say that since 1975, the world of the auto technician has been a high tech one. Though smaller, today's cars are comprised of a long and rapidly expanding list of electronic components. Fully half of the cars on the road have some form of computerized mechanism. And, by 1990, virtually all of them will.

But, smart cars need even smarter technicians, who are just as comfortable with micro processors and digital readouts as they are with screw drivers and torque wrenches.

Gradually, your technician is shedding the denim coveralls of a mechanic in favour of the gaberdine smock of a diagnostician. On his shelf are three-inch thick parts and service manuals that give him the specs on all the latest electronic wizardry in just about every make and model of car you can think of. In his shop, standing beside the traditional tools of his trade, is a battery of the latest electronic diagnostic equipment.

Constant updating of technical skills and knowledge are a must if your technician hopes to keep up with all the changes that roll off the car manufacturer's assembly lines.

Unlike the medical profession, which has been servicing the same two basic models for centuries, automobile technicians have to keep adapting to patients that become more sophisticated with each passing year.

What has gotten into your technician's head? New knowledge, new techniques, new technology - and the skill to put them all together for you.

New wipers a good idea

For motorists, winter means snow tires, snow shovels and snow scrapers. Yet, relatively few drivers are aware of another means to meet the challenge of safe winter driving -- winter blades -- special windshield wipers designed to maintain good visibility in winter's tough conditions.

A study, conducted by the research department of Anco, showed that 93 percent of drivers who tested the wipers said snow blades did improve winter driving visibility and 89 percent said that the special blades performed better than regular blades.

The winter blade is a wiper with a flexible rubber case that completely covers the metal super-structure of the blade. Wiper experts at Anco, a leading manufacturer of windshield wiper products, explain that the case is designed to keep the blade flexible by preventing ice or snow build-up on the moving parts of the blade.

Test participants -- 42 snowbelt automotive writers and 115 airport limousine drivers -- compared the performance of a winter blade against a regular blade during a 20-week testing period. A blade-to-blade comparison ensured that both blades were exposed to the same weather and use conditions. Groups were asked to check for performance differences: cleaning without streaking, easy snow and ice removal, durable performance, and blade flexibility throughout the season.

In the field tests, all drivers rated winter blade performance "excellent" or "good" and 89 percent reported the blades worked better than regular blades.

Good visibility in winter means care of the windshield and the wiper, and test results now show that winter blades actually out-perform regular blades for safe winter driving.

Workshops included: accommodations for seniors; health; Home Support Services; safety programs, finance/legal matters; transportation; volunteers; communications. Reports will be given by the participants at our general meeting November 15 at 10 a.m. in the Drop In Centre.

Powerful suggestions

the opportunity to pick up a bit of Spanish. Graham couldn't explain what happened anymore than the friends could.

There is an even more complex form of hypnosis, Graham says. Hypnosis can fall under three categories -- light, medium and deep. Graham rarely strays from the light and medium, making people believe they are a pile of Jello on the floor that can't move, but if he was to put someone in a deep sleep, "I could even take out their appendix," and they would feel no pain.

One of Graham's most popular tricks is making people see others without their clothes on, or at least they think the other person doesn't have any clothes on. When asked if the person in the trance sees the other as he or she really is, or how they would dream them to be, Graham says that one time when he did this to a group of women, they could all tell that the man had had a recent operation because of a scar.

Even with all of these examples, there are bound to be some skeptics who think Graham's show is like a magician's -- all hocus pocus.

"It bothers me," he says. "There are people you never convince."

Most people in the audience seem to accept Graham for what he is, even though they're not exactly sure what he does. They are able to suspend doubts and reason for just a few hours and let Graham take them into a world they are only slightly aware of.

"The more intelligent a person is, the easier they are to hypnotize because their minds are more active," he says.

Perhaps you can also say that the more someone is able to accept the irrational, the inexplicable and the unscientific, the more they are able to sit back and enjoy the entertainment Graham offers them.

Pillowcases of goodies, colourful kids' costumes, shadows and spooks, glowing jack o'lanterns, and trips to the dentist are all a part of that special Hallowe'en magic

New Horizons grant helps renovations

Kinmount Korner by Millie Moss

Intended for last week

Thanks to all of you who asked re no column of mine last week. It was there alright folks, just no "Millie picture" or "Kinmount Korner" heading. Guess it was just overlooked. Sorry if you missed it and hopefully it won't happen again.

The Kinmount Senior Citizens have received the first installment of their New Horizons grant and electrical heat is being installed in the station and this week we hope to have blown-in insulation. This will allow some inside work for setting up the Drop-In Centre to start during the Winter even though the water may not be brought in until the Spring of 1986. Our old railroad station in Kinmount will be one of the places to see while sight-seeing in this area.

The St. James A.C.W. Kinmount annual turkey supper was again a great success even though attendance was down by some 52 people. Everyone who attended had plenty of good home cooked food. Many thanks to all who helped in any way, baking pies, rolls, roasting the turkeys and making the gravies and stuffings, preparing and cooking the vegetables, setting up the tables and cleaning up afterward, to the men; thanks once again for helping in the kitchen and for the perfect carving job you do, to the ladies who served at the tables, the pie cutter and dish washers. It's a lot of work, but all in a very good cause. We don't know what we'd do without you and of course there'd be no point in all this if it weren't for you, the people who come each year and enjoy the bountiful harvest.

Winners of the raffle which was held were: a beautiful afghan won by L. Robertson, Anglican Mission Baker Lake, North West Territories. The afghan will be sent to an address in Pickering. The second prize of a lovely jacket went to Elaine Cooper of Kinmount and to Elaine, whom I'm sure will be reading this: "I'm not quite up to walking to your house yet, but I haven't forgotten you and will stop in soon."

Norland Public School will be closed for the day on November 15 because of a teacher's Professional Activity Day. There will be a bazaar and baked goods sale sponsored by the Home and

School at Norland Town Hall on Saturday, December 7 from 12:00 noon to 3:00 p.m. If you wish to donate towards this sale you may drop items off at the Norland Public School or at Brenda Chynoweth's 454-8102. Baked goods can be brought to the Hall on December 7 at 10:00 a.m. or again, call Brenda Chynoweth.

The school photographer, Canadian School Studios, will be in the Norland School to take individual and class pictures on Tuesday, October 29. Pictures have already been taken at Fenelon Falls Public School. Mother's of preschool children may have pictures taken between 12:00 and 1:00 p.m. only, on October 29 at Norland Public School. Mr. McGregor will be leading a Remembrance Day Program for the pupils and any parents who wish to attend, at the Norland Hall at 11:00 a.m. on November 11.

To you star gazers: Haley's Comet is now visible in small amateur telescopes; it's closer than Mars by the end of the month. Next month, after 76 years, it may be visible to the naked eye.

C.W.L. euchre results for October 22: ladies high: Bertha Stata, ladies low: Rubie Schell, men's high: Martha Mansfield, men's low: James Simpson, lone hands: Gladys Anderson. There were seven tables for these games at St. Patrick's Hall in Kinmount.

The C.W.L. will be holding their annual Turkey bingo on Tuesday, December 3, beginning at 8:00 p.m. in the Kinmount Legion Hall. There will be 20 games in all with 16 turkeys to be won, two chare the wealth games and two special games.

Welcome home to Win and Bill Wilson who have been visiting family in British Columbia recently.

A birthday party was celebrated in honour of Jason Moss at his dad's Norland home on Saturday, October 19. Present to help him enjoy his day were: great grandma Pyke, great Uncle Jack Pyke, great Uncle Alex Graham, friends Jason Bartley, Brock Spencer and Quentin Greer, all of Norland, Uncle Neil Hughes with cousins Jay and Michael from Haliburton. Dad, grandma and grampa Moss of course were also there.

Helen Graham, Rotha Bryant, Vera Brown and Elizabeth Fryer were chauffeured to Peterborough on Saturday morning, October 19 by Ruth Ann Mathews for which all the ladies thank her. They were in Peterborough to attend a Horticultural Society special meeting and election of officers. Ken Reeves of Ken's Floral Centre and who can be heard on CBC radio each day at noon, was a guest speaker and gave many interesting hints as to when and when not to plant certain types of flowers, how to rid your gardens of unwanted pests, etc. A delicious chicken dinner was enjoyed at Sir Sandford Fleming College. All in all it was an enjoyable day.

Alex Graham has been on the ailing list of late and we all wish him well.

Sympathy to Sue Wrigley and all her family in the recent death of her aunt in Lindsay. Following a recent trip to Lindsay, Bill and I spotted a lot of black smoke billowing into the sky as we turned onto highway 35. It appeared much closer than it actually was and we never did see where it was coming from, but knew it had to be a bad one. Since then Bill heard a barn had been levelled and a Lindsay paper noted a fire that had gutted a garage narrowly missing homes nearby.

Helen Mullin is a patient in Ross Memorial Hospital and hopefully she'll be well soon.

Debbie Bates and Vi Crego shared the two hundred dollar bingo jackpot at the Kinmount Legion on Friday, October 25. Two months til Xmas girls so you've got a start on your spending money!

Four or five times now I've mentioned the bad luck of our son in tickets. He always seems to miss one number. Well, on the Provincial draw, Friday, October 25, the number called was 6416061. Bill had 6416069. He's done it again! One of these days Bill, this can't go on forever. Just keep thinking Murphy's Law or is that what you've been doing?

Stay well and happy, read The Echo, I can be reached at 488-2353 and remember, you're valuable, when you're not here, we miss you.

St. James, Kinmount, A.C.W. will be holding their annual Christmas Bazaar in the community centre on Saturday, November 23 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Santa will be there and as usual lunch will be available. This year the biggest and best sale ever is hoped for, with a white elephant table, home baking table, all kinds of handmade items just in time for gift giving and racks of good used clothing. Get some friends together and come out for a few hours of good fun and visiting.

Janet Rafuse and her young son visited with Mary and John Pyke, Helen and Alex Graham at their Norland homes from Jackson's Point on Monday, October 29.

Happy birthday on October 29 to Audrey Belanger.

There was a very nice showing of handcrafts and baked goods at the community hall a week ago and I personally enjoyed my visit there very much. For a first time venture I'm told, the people involved thought it successful and are looking forward to another try before Christmas, possibly late November or early December. I will have dates later.

To all of you who like to sit and reminisce once in awhile, the following are excerpts taken from the old Watchman-Warder, which cost five cents per single copy. The paper itself was as wide as it was long in size and the date on the paper I am copying is Wednesday, February 23, 1944. I would like to thank Percy Brown of Lindsay, who has a summer home in Kinmount, for being kind enough to think of me and bringing this copy over.

Now for a few news items of 1944: "Lindsay Soldier Dies Overseas - Mr. Archie McGregor, 86 Queen St., has received word that his son, Pte. Kenneth McGregor, was killed overseas. The McGregor family moved to Lindsay from Cobocok and Mr. McGregor has been employed with the Kawartha Lumber Co. Pte. McGregor was with an Eastern Ontario regiment in Italy. Wren Beryl Austin spent a brief leave with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Austin, recently. Our village is quite the busy place these days, with ice-cutting in full swing and logs being drawn by trucks and dumped where they will be cut when Mr. J. Austin's new mill is completed in the spring. Both the J. Austin Lumber Co. and the Phillips Lumber Co. report the largest cut ahead for the summer months that they have had in many years. Every available man is busy these days and the weather has been ideal during the winter for bush work.

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Les Fountain (nee Miss Helen Graham) who were married on Saturday. The Red Cross held their regular meeting on Wednesday afternoon in the community hall and a considerable amount of finished work was handed in. The following letters were received during the week, thanking the Red Cross for Christmas parcels received: somewhere in England, Jan. 17, '44 - Dear ladies: I wish to thank you for your lovely parcel which arrived shortly after Christmas and in perfect condition. The contents were greatly appreciated, and it was very kind indeed of you to remember me. I am enjoying the work over here, glad to have a share in caring for the boys from home, of whom we are very proud. We also very proud of our Red Cross and its wonderful work which we see all around us. Again, many thanks and best wishes for the New Year. Yours sincerely, Lieut. Mildred Wilson. Jan. 29, '44 - Dear Friends, Received your most welcome parcel today and many thanks. Everything was swell. It is so nice to get things from back home and to know of the good work the Kinmount Red Cross is doing for the boys over here. This is my fourth year over here and I sure will be glad to get home to my wife and children again. But by the look of things it won't be long now. Once again, many thanks for parcel. Yours sincerely, Spr. James Webb. Buy extra War Savings Stamps during February: butter (Silverbrook) first grade lb. 38 cents, Fluffio shortening lb. 18 cents, Oats (Ogilvie's) 48 oz. pkg. 17 cents Chipso large pkg. 22 cents, P. & G. soap, 3 cakes 13 cents, flour gilt edge, 7 lb. pkg. 19 cents or 24 lb. pkg. 59 cents, Camay soap 2 cakes 11 cents. Pure lard Maple Leaf, lb. 15 cents, Ann Page Vitamin B White, whole wheat, cracked wheat bread, 2-24 oz. loaves, 15 cents. I think this will have to do for our fond memories of yesteryear for this week.

There were ten members at an A.C.W. meeting at St. James Hall last Wednesday morning and a number of things were discussed re the upcoming annual Christmas Bazaar. More on that next week.

Happy anniversary to Joyce and Jack Hills on Sunday, November 3. Happy, though belated, 21st birthday greetings to Jennifer Mills of Pickering, on Saturday, October 26. Grandma Win Wilson of Kinmount was there to help Jennifer celebrate her day.

Thursday, November 14 at 8 p.m. the Kinmount Senior Citizens will be holding a card party, lunch, penny table and prizes to be won. Admittance is one dollar and everyone is welcome.

A pair of prescription sunglasses has been found in town and if they are yours they can be picked up at Kinmount Post Office.

Anthony Rolfe is home from hospital and doing well.

To you folks who phoned re the lack of my column in last week's issue of the Echo: my apologies. I did write and if I'm lucky the Editor may see fit to print it this week. What happened was that the mail was picked up earlier than usual because of some paving work being done in Lindsay and the mailman wanting to get back before they started. I was not informed and Bill was a the Post Office 5 to 11 a.m. in time to see the mailman leaving. I had to go to Physiotherapy at Haliburton Hospital on Tuesday morning so left earlier than usual, so that I could drop the column off at the Echo office, where I was told it would probably be still in time. Obviously it wasn't but I did my best to get your articles printed. As I said before, maybe the editor will print it in this issue. Maybe I should also consider getting the column in the mail by Friday and then, hopefully, it would reach Haliburton by Monday or Tuesday providing of course, there was no paving going on in Lindsay on Friday.

It was a quiet Halloween around our avenue. Not nearly so many goblins were at the door this year and I'm told it was the same over Norland way, except of course, for the proverbial

Candidate meeting throws no election surprises

Wilberforce news by Winnie Schofield

The pre election candidate meeting held at the Lloyd Watson Centre was well attended. It was a quiet meeting with no disturbances as the six people seeking a seat on Monmouth council put forward their ideas and concerns. Mention was made of past achievements that have made Monmouth one of the best equipped and finest townships of its size to be found in the province. One candidate, Gary Stoughton, saw room for improvement in some areas and these problems he would find a solution for when elected. Dwayne Tighe's reply to this was that a member of council had but one voice and must attain cooperation of the other members before changes could be made effective. School board representative Buster Anderson, in by acclamation, thanked the people for their confidence in him and promised assistance with any school problem brought to his notice. Harry Clark, still deputy reeve, gave a lively review of his past term reporting on matters of interest discovered through his work on various committees.

Question period was dull with little response from the complacent crowd. Pearl Foster sought to inject a spark of controversy with a few pertinent questions but these were quickly put down by Reeve Keith Tallman and it could be seen that no one had an axe to grind. Following the meeting people mingled and sampled refreshments that had been prepared by members of the Monmouth Senior Citizen Club.

These six people running for council have excellent qualifications that will make a selection difficult. Please get out and vote at our coming municipal election that will be held on November 12 in the municipal chambers. Voting time is 11 a.m. until 8 p.m. At the Monmouth advance poll 75 votes were cast. These were thought to have been mainly hunters. Over in Cardiff Township, where a real battle is going on, 275 votes were registered at the advance poll with cottagers driving in to vote.

Barbara and Mike Croft are delighted with the arrival of their daughter Jaqueline Hilary. Born at the Metropolitan Hospital in Windsor on October 30, this lovely baby weighed 8 lb. 14 oz. This is the couple's first child and is a first grandchild for Bessie and Mel Croft. Other proud grandparents are Evelyn and Jim Graves. Great grandparents are Mrs. May Croft of Wilberforce, Florence and Garnet Lee of Tory Hill and Mary Laurence.

Eastern Haliburton is gaining publicity in Toronto through the publication of "Me n Len". Joey Slinger, Toronto Star columnist, wrote this week about the charming manner of speech used by the local people and the shenanigans of those who catered to the great thirst of the prohibition times by making moonshine. Fame comes in various disguises and who knows what all this notoriety may bring to our tourist industry. If Kentucky draws people seeking quaint lifestyles why not eastern Haliburton County.

Curling got underway with a wine and cheese jitney on Saturday, November 2. Two six ends were played with enthusiasm. Big winner of the day was the rink of Reg

Schofield, Bruce Kellar, Alice Poulin and Fred Agnew. In second place was skip Roger Hogan with his team of Judy Hogan, Frank Pagnello and Kyra Pagnello. Clinching third spot was skip Dave Nicholson with Debbie Nicholson, Mike Marshall and Karen Marshall.

An article by Virginia Muenzel in last week's Echo brought up the old story of the inhumane habit of summer visitors discarding unwanted animals at the local dump site. Similar distressing tales have been told in this section of the county. Right after reading this article I came across the story of a cat that became a treasured pet after being rescued from a dump; left there by city people to starve. This story was written in 1917 which proves that this despicable habit has been with us for a long time.

On Sunday members of Wilberforce Legion Branch 624 and members of the Ladies' Auxiliary held a church parade. They joined with the congregation of the Tory Hill United Church in morning service. The Legion Padre, Maurice Bradley, officiated.

The Legion Poppy Drive will be held this Saturday, November 9. Please make callers welcome as they offer you a poppy of remembrance.

November 11 is the time to give thanks for peace when Armistice Day takes place. There will be a memorial service held at the Wilberforce cenotaph at 11 a.m.

Members of the Legion and of the Ladies' Auxiliary will gather at the fire hall at 10:30 a.m. Following the service you are invited to meet at the Legion Hall where a turkey dinner will be served. There will be a turkey roll at the Legion hall on November 8 and November 15.

Problems at the arena have been attended to, some painting has been done and the ice is going in this week. On November 9 hockey practice begins with the Novices and Tykes at 12:00 a.m., the Atoms at 1:00 p.m. and Pee Wees at 2:00 p.m. and the Bantams at 3:00 p.m. New players will be welcomed.

Inn's grant now a loan

The provincial contribution announced by the previous government to Deerpark Inn, considered unacceptable by the Liberal government, will now be a fully repayable loan, instead of part grant and part loan, Ontario Minister of Tourism and Recreation, John Eakins announced in the house last week.

A review was initiated by the government of the $10-million agreement between the Ontario and federal governments and Deerpark Resorts Ltd., for expansion of the Deerpark Inn in Muskoka.

As a consequence, the Ministry of Tourism and Recreation and the Ontario Development Corporation were authorized by the Cabinet to negotiate with the other parties to seek a resolution. Eakins said a revised agreement, satisfactory to all parties, has been signed. The principal change is that the entire $5 million Provincial contribution will now be a fully repayable loan, with no grant. The $5 million federal contribution will also be subject to the same condition.

"I can also confirm that the recreation and sport facilities involved in this expansion will be available for use by members of the general public," he said.

Seat belts on school buses being tested

Transport Canada officials are continuing research and testing on the effectiveness of seat belts in school buses.

A 1975 Transport Canada study estimated school bus mileage in Canada at about 600,000 km annually. Today, it is estimated at over one million kilometres annually due to a larger busing program and longer individual trips.

Some 14 deaths have been recorded over the past five years, of which five occurred outside the school bus.

There are currently 35 federal safety standards that buses must meet, and four of these were added in 1980. A Transport Canada official said seat belts will reduce the risk of death or serious injury by up to 60%, but a "compartmentalization" approach was adopted for school buses to protect passengers inside the bus, and structural improvements were required to prevent ejection from the bus.

At the same time, seat belts were required on small buses as they lack the size, weight and visibility of the larger buses. When regulations requiring seat belts on all buses were being considered, there was considerable opposition centred around cost of installation, lack of evidence of effectiveness and operational problems.

Recent tests have shown that with the type of seat required there is an increased risk of head and neck injury in frontal collisions when school bus occupants use lap belts. These tests have not shown that would happen in side impact collisions or rollovers, or what could be achieved with different belt/seat configurations such as rearward facing seats.

Evidence suggests the current approach has been successful, with a decline in deaths and injuries. Costs of some suggested improvements could be formidable.

Carnarvon

We are pleased to see M.B. Windsor up and around again after his surgery. Spending time with him were Mrs. Duane Windsor of Hailybury and Mr. and Mrs. Garth Windsor of Hornepayne. Helen will stay with Maurice for the rest of the week.

Our village has been hit with a double tragedy this weekend. In the small hours of Saturday morning Mrs. Joyce Miscio was aroused from sleep to find the house on fire. Fortunately she and her two sons were able to get out but the home was totally destroyed. Later the same day seven year old Laura Rowden, daughter of Keith and Debbie Rowden, was killed when a pickup she was a passenger in rolled off the road at West Guilford. Our deepest sympathy to the family.

We are pleased to report that Hal Burton is progressing after his surgery on Wednesday at Oshawa General Hospital. Do drop a card to brighten his day.

Spending some time with Mrs. Bill McKay last week were Mrs. Cathy Quinn of Pickering and Mrs. Bette Mitchell of Dunsford.

Congratulations to Mrs. Alan Thomas on her win of $500 at the Minden Valu Mart.

I would like to correct an error in the obituary of Mrs. Ruby McKay, who was survived by her five children, her oldest son Vernon, also Lyle, Beatrice, Shirley and Daryl, of B.C.

A baby shower was held on Tuesday night at the home of Cathy Thomas for Mrs. Brian Barnhart and her new baby going on the same night there was a good turnout.

Quite a few points were discussed at the meet the candidates night on Tuesday at Reflections Restaurant. There was a very good turnout. It is hoped that all of the candidates will get the message that all outlying areas are getting tired of all our tax money with the exception of education being spent in the village of Minden.

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

Hyland Crest Home would like to inform you and your readers that Mr. Bert Harrison will not be writing his column, "Senior League", because he is in the hospital.

I know that his readers wish Mr. Harrison all the best. We expect him to be home again soon, and we trust that he will be able to continue to write his weekly column in the future.

Hyland Crest Home,
Sidney Brown,
Administrator

To The Editor:

I would like to correct the very faulty interpretation of history and morality contained in last week's column by Catherine Denholm.

Sexual orgies were in "the realm of sin" long before syphilis and gonorrhea made sin extremely costly. The moral laws against fornication, adultery and homosexuality were laid down in the Old Testament thousands of years ago. In the New Testament "orgies" are specifically included in a list of sins (Galatians 5:20,21) that is contrasted to the Christian lifestyle.

We don't need any new moral code in response to AIDS. What we all need is a return to the Biblical morality that was intended to guide us into healthful living.

Yours sincerely, egg throwers. I just hope you and your families are never hungry. Maybe you'll remember the awful waste and the mess you cause other people. I know who you are and just want you to know that when people of our age were your age we were taken by the ear, the scruff of the neck or even by the backside - and made to clean it up.

Lots of times the kids had to clean all the way down the street but of course times have changed and little darlings today scream abuse if a voice is raised in protest. I was told police were looking for the egg tossers over at Norland because a cruiser was hit. It's your tax dollars, folks and it's nice you can afford to allow the kids to have eggs but if your property was messed up by others, don't be upset, you gave yours the go ahead.

Bill Stata is very ill in a Peterborough hospital and our good wishes go out to him at this time. There were 13 of us attending an early All Saints Day Service at St. James Anglican Church in Kinmount last Friday morning and following the service we all sat down to breakfast in the church and enjoyed good fellowship.

Stay well and happy, read the Echo, give me a call at 488-2353 and remember: trying to do better keeps life interesting.
